PREFACE.

———:o:———

Circumstances have led to this, the ninth volume, being published last of the twelve which compose the Mysore Archæological Series. The total number of inscriptions copied in situ and published with translations in the twelve volumes is 8869, and I cannot be too thankful for having been permitted to bring so laborious an undertaking to an end. The epigraphic survey of the various Districts has been, it may be said, practically exhaustive.

When the work was first entered upon, neither myself nor the Government of Mysore had any conception of the magnitude of the task involved, or there might have been hesitation on both sides to take it up. We may congratulate ourselves, therefore, now it has come to a close, that the results have been so fruitful. For not only has the eminently interesting ancient history of the State itself been brought to light as far back as the 3rd century B. C., but discoveries have been made of such value as to mark an epoch in Indian Archæology. A final volume is proposed bringing to one convenient focus the varied historical details scattered throughout the series.

In the present volume important information is supplied regarding the Gangas of Mysore and the Gangas of Kaḷinga, as well as in relation to the Râshṭrakûṭas. The Chôḷa inscriptions are numerous[1] and certain of them contain fresh particulars which add to our knowledge respecting the Chôḷa period. Interesting light is thrown on the origin of the Kongâḷvas, and of the connection of that line of kings and of the Changâḷvas with Coorg.

The Hoysaḷa inscriptions include a number of the time of Râmanâtha and his son. Also the elaborate plates of Sômêśvara, recording the grants he made in memory of his Tamil wife Sômalâ. Of interest too are the benefactions made by the liberal-minded Adaḷa chiefs of Marugare-nâḍ, who impartially patronized the four creeds,—those of Jina, Buddha, S'iva and Vishṇu.

Under Vijayanagar we have another version of the so-called Râmânujâchârya inscription at S'ravaṇa Belgoḷa, which relates how Bukka-Râya reconciled the Jains and the Vaishnavas. Of unique interest is the inscription of the time of Aurangzeb, the Mughal emperor, at Doḍ-Ballâpur.

Attention may also be directed to the information obtained from literature about the Sugaṭûr chiefs, who ruled over the Kolar and the east of the Bangalore District in the Vijayanagar period. Also to the curious account about an elephant in D B 64.

The Chinese inscription on the bell at the Halsûr rock is deserving of notice, and the story of how the bell came to be there.

The illustrations in this volume have been prepared by T. Namaśśivâyam Pillai, the draughtsman and photographer of my office.

Bangalore, Xmas 1905.

INTRODUCTION.

———:o:———

The present volume, which relates to the Bangalore District, completes the Mysore Archæological Series of the Epigraphia Carnatica. It contains 1069 inscriptions, of which 46 belong to Coorg, added in a Supplement. The latter were obtained in the course of inquiries relating to the Gazetteer of Coorg which I was compiling for the Imperial Gazetteer of India, and are additional to those in the Coorg volume, the first of the present series, and to two in the Tumkur volume, the last. The period covered by the inscriptions here dealt with extends from the 5th century to the middle of the 19th. Those which can be assigned to specific dynasties or periods may be arranged as follows :—

Gangas	36	A.D.	459—1298	Sigala-nâḍ	12		1295—1633
Kalinga Gangas	1		700	Jiguni	2		1302—1422
Râshṭrakûṭas	6		802— 980	Kukkala-nâḍ	10		1330—1430
Pallavas	11		820— 997	Vijayanagar	221		1340—1713
Kadambas	1		1095	Yelahanka	16		1367—1713
Chaḷukyas	1		1105	Mahrattas	8		1544—1728
Chôḷas	48		997—1398	Sugaṭûr	15		1559—1693
Vaidumbas	1		1100	Âvati	12		1586—1729
Kongâḷvas	12		1050—1390	Channapaṭṇa	3		1621—1676
Changâḷvas	8		1220—1544	Mughals	2		1691—1745
Hoysalas	203		1110—1346	Chinese	1		1741
Sêunas	1		1291	Bêlûr	2		1755—1756
Nripatunga-kula	2		1267—1283	Mysore	28		1647—1851

The inscriptions are reviewed in this Introduction under each of the above heads, as far as possible in chronological order, attention being directed to whatever seems to call for special notice. In order to save space, the following abbreviations have been adopted for the names of the tâluqs :— An=Ânekal ; Bn=Bangalore ; Cp=Channapaṭṇa ; Dv=Dêvanhaḷḷi ; DB=DodBallâpur ; Ht=Hoskôṭe ; Kn=Kânkânhaḷḷi ; Ma=Mâgaḍi ; and Nl=Nelamangala. For Coorg the contraction Cg is used, as before.

Gangas

The earliest of the Ganga grants in thiis volume is DB 67[1], of the time of Koṅgaṇi-mahârâja, who is known by the distinctive name of Avinîta. It is dated in the 29th year of his reign, the year Jaya, which corresponds with 459 A.D. We thus get 430 A.D. for the beginning of his reign[2], and the end of that of his predecessor. Moreover from DB 68, to be noticed below, we get 482 A.D. for the last year of his reign, which thus continued for 52 years, nowise improbable in itself, and rendered quite admissible on remembering that he was crowned, as stated in numerous inscriptions, while an infant on his mother's lap.

The succession of the previous kings of the line is as given in other Ganga plates that have been published. But in the details relating to each there are some important variations. The first king, Koṅgaṇivarmmâ, is said to be glorious with the wealth of a kingdom acquired by the might of his own arm. A somewhat similar statement is made in certain other early grants, such as Mr 72, 73 (vol x), Mi 110 (vol xii) and Bn 141 in the presnt volume, all of which describe the kingdom as acquired by swift victory. The same king is farther said to have been a wild-fire in consuming the stubble of the forest called Bâṇa. This is confirmed by the plates of Hastimalla,[1] which say that the first Ganga king Koṅgaṇi was consecrated to conquer the Bâṇa-maṇḍala. The period may be inferred from the statement in the Tâlgunda pillar inscription (Sk 176, vol VII) that Mayûraśarmmâ, the progenitor of the Kadamba kings, when an outlaw in the S'rîparvata forests (Karnûl District), levied tribute from the great Bâṇa and other kings. Of the Mahâvali or Bâṇa kings an account has been given in the Kolar volume (X), numerous records of the line being found in the east of that District. The ornament of a wound obtained in war, which is generally attributed to the first Ganga king, is here applied to the second. The third is said to have been a skilful rider of elephants and horses. Of Vishṇugôpa the interesting fact is related that his mental energy was unimpaired to the end of life, indicating that he lived to a great age. This statement is unique and occurs in no other grant. His son Mâdhava, elsewhere distinguished as Taḍangâla Mâdhava, is said, among other praises, to have been of wide-spread fame on account of his renewal of Brahman endowments long since destroyed.

The grant made consisted of land under the Mêlûr tank, which was given to a Taittiriya Brahman named Kâḍasvâmi, who was a resident of Tippûr in the Marugare-râshṭra. Tippûr is in the Doḍ-Ballâpur tâluq, and there is a Mêlûr in the Sidlaghatta tâluq, about 25 miles to the east of it. Among the conditions of the grant was entire freedom from the eighteen castes. These are the 18 paṇas, composed of the agricultural, artisan and trading classes, who are divided into the Right-hand and Left-hand factions. This recognition of the eighteen castes here testifies to their antiquity.

The next two Ganga grants (Bn 141, DB 68[2]) are of the time of Durvvinîta, called in the latter Koṅgaṇivṛiddha-Râja. The first is of his 4th year, and the second of his 35th year, described as the year Vijaya, which corresponds with 517 A.D. We thus get 482 A.D. for the beginning of his reign, and 485 for the date of Bn 141. How much longer he reigned after 517 we do not know.

In Bn 141 may be noted the following special and interesting points in the descriptions of the several kings, which in general are similar to those in previously published grants. The second Mâdhava is said to have had his two arms grown stout and hard with athletic exercises, and his two arms shone with the gems of hard knobs produced by drawing his bow. He married the sister of the Kadamba king Krishnavarmmâ, and their son was the king generally known as Avinîta, who was anointed to the kingdom on the couch of the lap of his divine mother. His son, generally distinguished as Durvvinîta, espoused a princess who (as DB 68 says) had herself chosen him, though from her birth assigned by her father, on the advice of his own guru, to the son of another. She was the daughter of the Punnâḍ Râja Skandavarmmâ. Durvvinîta apparently followed the religion of Vishnu, and had agents for maintaining the castes and religious orders of the South. He made a grant to a Brahman named Vâsaśarmmâ, but the details are wanting, as the plate containing them is lost.

In DB 68 is introduced, in connection with the third Mâdhava, the phrase which generally appears in subsequent Ganga grants,—that he was daily eager to extricate the ox of merit from the thick mire of the Kali-yuga in which it had sunk. The Kadamba king whose sister he married is said to have performed an uninterrupted horse-sacrifice. Avinîta is stated to have had parties of councillors attached to him by continual affection and gifts. He is also said to have been devoted like Vaivasvata Manu to maintaining the castes and religious orders in the South. Durvvinîta waged, it is said, as repeated in subsequent grants, sanguinary wars for the possession of Andari, Âlattûr, Poruḷaṟe, Pennagara and other places. Of these, Âlattûr is in Coimbatore District, and Pennagara in Salem District.[1] He is also said to have become ruler of the whole of Pânnâḍ (or ?Pâkhâḍ) and Punnâḍ. The latter was in the south-west of the Mysore District, and had for its capital Kitthipura, which is identified (Hg 56, vol iv) with Kittûr on the Kabbaṇi river in Heggadadêvankôṭe tâluq. It is the Punnâṭa to which the Jain migration from the North went in the 3rd century B. C., and the Pounnata mentioned by Ptolemy in the 2nd century A.D. Its name also occurs in the 5th century under Avinîta, and it was probably a Six Thousand province.[2]

The grant was made to a Brahman named Dêvaśarmmâ, called Mahâdêva, who was a descendant from Vâlmîki, and expounder of the Vâjasêni. The Bempûr Iśvara-sthâna named Kelale was given to him. Bempûr, as appears from Bn 83, was the modern Bêgûr, in the south of the Bangalore tâluq.

There is an interval of two centuries between this and the next Ganga inscription, but the intervening history will appear under other inscriptions farther on. We have now to notice Ht 86, in which S'rîpurushayya is said to be ruling the Kerekunda Three Hundred. This was probably before he came to the throne. Then follows Ht 21, in which he is called Koṅgoṇi Muttarasa, the latter his personal name, as we know from other inscriptions (TN 1, vol. iii, etc). By his orders Siya-Vallavarasa, that is Singa-Vallabharasa, attacked Kâḍuveṭṭi (the Pallava king), and being wounded, died in Kovaḷâla or Kolar (Ht 22). The Humcha inscription Nr 35 (vol viii) has already given us the account of S'rîpurusha's victory over Kâḍuveṭṭi, from whom he took away the title of Permmânaḍi. We then have three inscriptions of him as S'rîpurusha-mahârâja (Bn 36, 55, Nl 33). No dates are given, but S'rîpurusha's time is absolutely fixed by Ng 85 (vol iv) and other grants. In Dv 67 and 74 we have (his son) Duggamâra.

The Manne plates (Nl 60) are of importance, and bear the date 797 A.D. They were issued in the name of Mârasimha, also called Lôka Trinêtra, who was the Yuvarâja or heir apparent and son of S'ivamâra, the son of S'rîpurusha. The descriptions relating to the kings before S'ivamâra correspond with those in other grants that have been published But of S'ivamâra and his son lengthy accounts are given.

S'ivamâra is said to have pulled down Vallabha with the band his sword, and besides descriptions of his exploits in war, he is said to be distinguished by all the marks of an emperor, and to be desirous only of benefitting others without seeking any benefit for himself. Moreover, placed in a world of endless calamities which were like twisted top-knots, he was a supporter of the fine arts, skilled in poetry, had studied to the full the Phanisuta system (Patanjali's), put to shame the learned by his insight into the essence of the management of elephants as taught by the yati born from the mouth of a female elephant,[3] was the author of a treatise on his own system of the treatment of elephants, was perfect in the method he had adopted for the management of horses, had built an ornamental bridge, and was skilled in everything connected with the drama in all its branches. He

[2] From Dv 41 and 43 (see also DB 38) it appears there was a local Punnâḍ Seventy in the country near Devanhaḷḷi. And curiously enough it is at first associated with (the Râshṭrakûṭa king) Akâḷavarsha. The probable explanation of the Mercara plates (Cg 1) therefore is, that the date given in them, which agrees perfectly with the time of Avinîta, refers to the grant originally made by him then to Vandanandi-bhaṭâra. Of that grant, Akâḷavarsha's minister having acquired the Badaneguppe village, presented it to the S'rîvijaya Jina temple of Talavana-nagara,—the principal sentence being Akâḷavarsha-pṛithuvî-vallabha-mantri.. paḍiye...mânôharam dattam. The inscription itself therefore would belong to the latter period, either that of Akâḷavarsha Krishna I, who ruled in the 8th century, or perhaps more likely that of Akâḷavarsha Krishṇâ II, who is said (EI, iv, 388) to have been honoured by the Ganga waiting at his gate, and who ruled from 878 to 913.

[3] A similar statement is made in Nj 269 (vol xii) in connection with Bûtugêndra, younger brother of Râjamalla II. The reference is to Pâḷakâpya, called also Karêṇubhu (born of a female elephant), who was the author of a work in Sanskrit named after him, Pâḷakâpyam, on the science of elephants, to which there is a commentary in Kannaḍa.

gained a victory over the Vallabha army which had encamped at the village of Mudugundûr (probably in Mandya tâluq), though it was supported by Râshṭrakûṭa Châlukya Haihaya and other brave leaders. The cavalry of Dhôra (the Râshṭrakûṭa king Dhârâvarsha), the most powerful in the region, which had spread over all quarters, he drove off with showers of arrows. And finally he was anointed to the kingdom (as also stated in Yd 60, vol iv) by the crowned kings Gôvinda-Râja and Nandivarmmâ of the Râshṭrakûṭa and Pallava lines, who bound the crown on his brow with their own hands.

From other records it is known that S'ivamâra was seized and imprisoned by the Râshṭrakûṭa king Dhruva, Dhôra or Dhârâvarsha, and the Râshṭrakûṭas appointed their own viceroys to govern the Ganga kingdom. But Gôvinda or Prabhûtavarsha released the Ganga king from his long and painful confinement. He, however, continued so hostile that he was again imprisoned. But he was at length again released, and as above stated was reinstated on the throne, the Râshṭrakûṭa and Pallava kings uniting in performing the ceremony. Very intimate alliance between the Gangas and Râshṭrakûṭas followed after this, with intermarriage in the families. The disasters which befell the king are of course not mentioned in the inscription, but he is said to have been born into a world of inextricable calamities (also in Kl 90) And without this explanation of the misfortunes he had undergone in the interval, no reason would appear for the sudden coronation of a king who had already been ruling in his own right. Of course it is possible that the actual coronation-anointing ceremony may not have been performed before.

Of Mârasimha, his son, a long string of praises follows, containing nothing of importance, but he had another name Lôka Trinêtra. This agrees with Sr 160 (vol iv), where he is called Mârasinga Ereyappa. As in that inscription, he had the rank of Yuvarâja, and yet here was ruling the entire Ganga-maṇḍala. Where then was his father ? It has been stated above that he was a prisoner with the Râshṭrakûṭas, and it is some confirmation of this to find his son in sole charge of the kingdom, though of course his authority was not recognized, the Râshṭrakûṭas having appointed their own viceroys to the Ganga territories. The date given, 797, may have been that of the actual grant, but inasmuch as the restoration to power of S'ivamâra is mentioned, which could not have taken place before 812, at which time the Râshṭrakûṭas still held the country (Gb 61, vol xii), and it seems probable that Mârasimha died before his father (see Intro. p 2, vol xii), the plates must have been engraved after the latter was again at liberty and in power, or 15 years or so after the grant was made. All reference to the donor's death or the other untoward events of the reign would naturally be omitted

A general named S'rîvijaya had built a fine Jina temple in Mânya-nagara or Mânya-pura—the Manne where the plates were obtained, which was the Ganga royal residence under S'rîpurusha. For this temple the general was granted the Kṛu-Vekkûr village. The priest of the temple was apparently Prabhâchandra, disciple of Pushpanandi, the learned head of his gaṇa, who was the disciple of Tôraṇâchâryya, described as the wisest man of this country, who lived in the S'âlmali village. The plates were engraved by Viśvakarmmâchâryya, the usual designation of the court engraver.

Here must be noticed Dv 44. This is a palpable Vijayanagar grant, written in Nâgarî characters of the Vijayanagar period. In the shape of the plates, the seal, the opening sentence, the boundary marks, and the signature, it is openly Vijayanagar, and no Ganga grant has any of these things. When first produced before me as I was leaving the Suradhênupura village, I was rather puzzled on reading it to find it contained the genealogy of the Ganga kings with the epithets and phrases generally applied to them. These were at the time known perhaps only to myself and to the pandit sent to assist me with inscriptions. Next day I again visited the village and in a casual manner asked the Brâhmans if they knew so and so, naming my pandit. Oh yes, they said, he is one of the shareholders of the village. The explanation of the mystery was thus quite clear. In view of the Inâm inquiry which was proceeding, my pandit (long since deceased) had made use of the knowledge of the ancient Ganga grants, of which he was then besides myself perhaps the only depository, to get it inserted in the beginning of the probably genuine Vijayanagar grant which the village possessed, in order to enhance its antiquity. Though a clever man, he was mentally affected through excessive ascetic observances, and no one who knew him would be surprised at his acting in this manner. But the hoax was too palpable to deceive any one who had experience of these inscriptions. Though detected as a fraud, I yet thought perhaps the details in the plates might have been taken from an actual Ganga grant possessed by the village. But on considering the transformation made in the names, and other points, I think no information can be depended on from it. The real donor was perhaps the (Vijayanagar) king Narasimha, the last mentioned, said to be another name of S'ivamâra.

Several undated Ganga inscriptions follow. Bn 42 of the time of Râchamalla Permmânaḍi is probably the earliest, and may belong to about 820. Then come four of the time of Satyavâkya Permmânaḍi, who was ruling the S'rî-râjya, the name given to the Ganga kingdom under S'rî-purusha. In Bn 40 a Noḷamba S'ivamâra was ruling Morasu-nâḍ under him, and Ereyappa was a witness of the grant. This may be the Ereyanga of Nj 269 (vol xii), who no doubt had the family name Ereyappa. Kn 88, Bn 79 and Kn 48 probably belong to Satyavâkya II. The last is of his 29th year, ? 899, and mentions Ereyapparasa's son. In the second, the Nâgattara chief is said to have fixed slu ices to two tanks at Agara (near Bangalore to the east, generally known as Agram to the military), and constructed a third.

Then come eight inscriptions all connected perhaps with the Ereyappa who is such a source of confusion in the Ganga genealogy from his records being undated, and from the difficulty of identifying him owing to his being mentioned at different times by every one of the various Ganga names. From Nj 269 (vol xii) we now know that he was the nephew of Satyavâkya II, who associated him in the government, probably in 904, and both continued to rule together. Whence in Ag 70 (vol v) Satyavâkya's 37th year is made to correspond with Ereyappa's 21st. The distinctive epithets of this Ereyappa, when used, are those given in Bn 83, and his chief antagonist was Mahêndra, the Noḷamba king for whom we have in Si 38 (vol xii) the date 878. Him he finally slew, thus obtaining the title Mahêndrântaka.

In Bn 83 we have an interesting record of him [1], with the specific epithets peculiar to him, enthroned as the sole ruler of the Gangavâḍi Ninety-six Thousand. He was still at war with Bîra-Mahêndra, and by his orders a force under Nâgattara seems to have marched upon Mahêndra's son Ayyapa. In a battle at Tumbepâḍi, Nâgattara saved the day, but sacrificed his life in so doing. This loyal service was rewarded by confirming the Nâgattara crown in the family, and giving them an estate of twelve villages. The Bempûr, which was the chief of these, is the modern Bêgûr, to the south of Bangalore, where the stone was originally found by Mr Bowring, then Chief Commissioner, and removed to the Museum [2].

In Cp 134 appears the mahârâjâdhirâja, chief lord of Kôlâla-pura, lord of Nandagiri, Permmânaḍi, ruling the kingdom. An 76 gives as Koṅgaṇivarmma-dharmma-mahârâjâdhirâja. An 73 not only has this and the preceding, but the curious combination Nîti-Permmânaḍi-varmma Ereyappa. Nâgattara's servant died in rescuing some cows. In Kn 52 we have simply Ereyappa, and under him Nolamba-Sênemâra's son Mendaṇṇa. Cp 159 is of apparently the first year of Nîtimârgga-Permmânaḍi's assuming the crown, but no year is mentioned or other clue given to the date. Cp 48 is dated in a year whose name ends in va, perhaps Prabhava, 907. Nîtimârgga is praised as the foremost of kings in ruling according to the nîti-s'âstra. While Nîtimârgga-Pêrmmânaḍi was ruling, Mûvaḍi (the third) Chilluka-dêva, who was in charge of certain temples, one of which was dedicated to S'ivamârêśvara and another to Nîtimârggêśvara, received a grant. In Si 28 (vol. xii) a Chilluka is mentioned in 943 who was a re-incarnation of Lakulîśa. Cp 161 is fully dated in 913, and Nîtimârgga-Permmânaḍi was ruling.

The two remaining Ganga inscriptions of the main line are of the time of Mârasingha, distinguished as Nolambakulântaka, but not dated. In Nl 54 Kali Tunga fell in a battle at Maṇṇe. In Cp 143 only the titles and Permmânaḍi are given.

As no more inscriptions remain to be published, it may be useful to give here a table, with annals, of the Gangas according to the information we now possess. The numbers indicate those who ruled and the order. The dates (A. D.) are taken entirely from inscriptions. Before the time of S'ivamâra I (680) these are mostly on copper plates, but Mb 263 and Cm 50 are on stone, and from his time stone inscriptions are the most numerous.

The intervening steps from Haris'chandra are—Bharata (wife Vijayâ), Gangâdatta (from whom the line obtained their name), Bharata, Gangâdatta, Haris'chandra, Bharata, Gangâdatta, Vishnugupta (wife Prithvimati),—ruling in Ahichchhatra, to whom Indra gave the elephant which became the Ganga crest,—Bhagadatta (progenitor of the Kaḷinga Gangas), and his brother S'rîdatta. cut through a stone pillar with a single stroke of his sword though only a youth—consecrated to conquer the Bâṇa country—a wild-fire to the stubble of the forest called Bâṇa.

2. Madhava II,
Kiriya Mâdhava
obtained the honours of the kingdom only for the sake of the good government of his subjects—skilled among those who expound and practise the nîti-śâstra— author of a commentary on the dattaka-sûtra (or law of adoption).

3. Harivarmmâ, ...247—266... removed the capital to Talavana-pura or Talakâḍ, on the Kâvêrî—used elephants in war.

4. Vishnugopa
devoted to the worship of gurus, cows and Brâhmans—worshipper of Nârâyaṇa (Vishnu)— his mental energy unimpaired to the end of life.

5. Madhava III, 357—370...
Taḍangâla Mâdhava
his arms grown stout and hard with athletic exercises—married the sister of the Kadamba king Krishnavarmmâ—daily eager to extricate the ox of merit from the thick mire of the Kali-yuga in which it had sunk—worshipper of Tryambaka (S'iva).

6. Avinita, 430—482
anointed to the throne when an infant on his mother's lap—his preceptor was the Jaina teacher Vijayakîrtti.

7. Durvvinita,[2] 482—517
had the Jaina grammarian Pûjyapâda as his preceptor—wrote a commentary on 15 sargas of the Kirâtârjunîya— named as one of the chief early Kannaḍa authors in the Kavirâjamârga— married the daughter of the Punnâḍ king Skandavarmmâ—waged sanguinary wars for Andari, Alattûr (Coimbatore District), Porulaṛe (? Chingleput District), Pennagara (Salem District), and other places—annexed Pânnâḍ and Punnâḍ—captured Kâḍuvetṭi on the field of battle, and placed his own daughter's son in Jayasimha's hereditary kingdom—followed the religion of Vishnu.

8. Mushkara,
Mokkara
married the daughter of the Sindhu Râja—
(the State seems to have again adopted the Jain religion).

[1] The name Koṅgaṇi or Koṅgaṇivarmmâ is applied to all the kings to the end. Koṅgaṇi also appears in the forms Koṅguṇi, Koṅguṇi, and exceptionally as Koṅgoṇi and Koṅgiṇi.

The Ganga sovereignty was overthrown by the Chôḷas in the reign of Râjarâja, whose so Râjêndra-Chôḷa captured Talakâḍ in 1004, and gained the name of Gangaigoṇḍa-Chôḷa. But according to Hk 4 it would appear that the Chôḷas had invaded the east of the country before this, and in Ht 111 Râjarâja is mentioned as the ruler of that part in 997.

The remaining inscriptions under the head of Gangas in this volume are concerned with some local governers of the 13th century who bore the general title of Râjarâja-Kaṛkaṭa-mahârâja, which indicates that it was of Chôḷa origin. The first four give the actual name as S'okkanâyan (Chokkanâyaka). In 1283 and 1294 (Bn 43, 100) they are mentioned as subordinate to the Hoysaḷa king Râmanâtha, and from the dates the others were probably so too. These two were called respectively Ganga-Perumâḷ and Tamattamavar. That the family were Gangas appears not only from their names, but from the Kaṛkaṭa-mârâya of Mr 14 (vol. x) named Uttama-S'ôla-Gangan Virundar having the distinctive Ganga titles—lord of Kuvalâḷa-pura, lord of Nandigiri.

Kalinga Gangas.

Of this line of rulers there is only one inscription, Bn 140. It is not dated, but probably belongs to about 700 A.D., and records a grant by Dêvêndravarmmâ, son of Râjêndravarmmâ, made from his residence of Kalinga-nagara (Ganjam district). He was a worshipper of the god Gôkarṇasvâmi of the Mahêndra mountain (Ganjam district). The king, being in good health, commands the householders of the Sidhatâ village and its neighbourhood in Varâhavartaṇi that the village has been granted to Râtuka, a resident of Pâlukôsu, of the Kateya-sûtra, in order to provide for the worship and offerings to (the god) Paramêśvara. The grant was apparently made at the instance of Navanîtêśvara of S'rîparvata, and was written by Utniṇa S'rîkhaṇḍi.

According to the inscriptions referred to above (p 6, note) the progenitor of the Kalinga Gangas was Bhagadatta, between whom and his brother S'rîdatta their father Vishnugupta divided his dominions, giving Kalinga to the former, and the ancestral kingdom, with the elephant, to the latter. A number of early inscriptions of the Kalinga Gangas have been found,[1] all issued from Kalinga-nagara, and dated in the years of the Ganga family (Gângeya-vaṁśa-samvatsara), an era not yet determined [2]. Among them are a Dêvêndravarmma in 51, in 183, and 254. But the first and third were sons of Anantavarmma, and the second a son of Guṇârnava. They were therefore different from the one of our present grant. The date 254 is supposed to be equivalent to about 774 A.D.

A very full and circumstantial genealogy of the Kalinga Gangas is given in an inscription of 1118 from Vizagapata m.[3] The line is here traced from Vishnu through Yayâti and Turvasu, who is said to have obtained from the Gangâ (the Ganges) the son Gângeya who was the progenitor of the Ganga kings. Gângeya, it says, was succeeded by the following 18 kings, most of whose names seem purely mythical:—

Virôchana	Saurânga	Jayasêna (II)
Samsêdya	Chitrâmbara	Jitavîrya
Samvêdin	Sâradhvaja	Vṛishadhvaja
Dattasêna	Dharma (Dhammaba)	Pragalba (Pragarbha)
Sôma	Parîkshit	Kôlâhala
Amśudatta	Jayasêna	Virôchana (II)

[1] Ind. Ant. xiii, xiv, xviii; Ep. Ind., iii, 17, 220.

[2] It is possible that the date given in the Kalbhâvi inscription (Ind. Ant., xviii, 309) as S'aka 261 is a mistake for the year of Śaka, and corresponds with 790 A.D. The words in l. 7 left untranslated are Marandale mêrey âge. This was the northern boundary of Gangavâḍi, as above stated (p. 6).

[3] Ind. Ant., xviii, 165.

Kôlâhala, the last but one of these, it says, "built the city named Kôlâhala in the great Gangavâḍi vishaya." After 80 kings (not named) in succession to Virôchana (II) had enjoyed the city of Kôlâhala, there arose Vîrasimha, who had five sons—Kâmârṇava, Dânârṇava, Guṇârṇava, Mârasimha, and Vajrahasta.[1] The first of these, giving over his own territory to his paternal uncle (not named), set out with his brothers to conquer the earth, and coming to the Mahêndra mountain, worshipped Gôkarna-svâmi, and obtained the crest of a bull and the symbols of sovereignty. He and his brothers subdued Balâditya, who had grown sick of war, and took possession of the (three) Kaḷingas. Giving Ambavâḍi to the third brother, Sôdâ or Sêḍà to the fourth, and Kaṇṭaka to the fifth,—Kâmârṇava, with his capital at Jantavura, ruled over the Kaḷingas, nominating his brother Dânârṇava as his successor. Of the line of kings so established some grants have been discovered, and the following is the list of the kings, with the number of years each is said to have ruled[2] —

Kâmârṇava (I)	36	Jitânkusa[4]	15	Guṇḍama (II)	3
Dânârṇava	40	Kaligalânkuśa	12	Madhu Kâmârṇava (VI)	19
Kâmârṇava (II)	50	Guṇḍama (I)	7	Vajrahasta (V)	30
Raṇârṇava	5	Kâmârṇava (IV)	3	(crowned in 1038)
Vajrahasta (II)	15	Vinayâditya	3	Râjarâja	8
Kâmarṇava (III)	19	Vajrahasta (IV)	35	Chôḷa Ganga
Guṇârṇava	27	Kâmârṇava (V) .	½	(crowned in 1078)

Vajrahasta V married the Vaidumba princess Vinaya-mahâdêvi. His son Râjarâja is said to have defeated the Dramilas, married Râjasundari, daughter of the Chôḷa king Râjêndra-Chôḷa, and saved the aged Vijayâditya from falling into the power of the Chôḷas, by upholding his authority in the west. Râjarâja's son Anantaśarma or Chôḷa-Ganga was anointed king of Trikalinga in 1078, and reinstated the fallen lord of Utkala (Orissa) in the east, and the sinking lord of Vengi in the west. Grants of his have been found dating in 1081, 1118, and 1135[4] . Two inscriptions of 1149 (Ck 29, 30, vol xii) say that Châma-Dêva, eldest son of the Oḍa-Râyîndra (or great king of Orissa) Chôḷa-Ganga, was born in the Hêjjâji Twelve of the Kâḍanûr Seventy. These places are both in Dod-Ballâpur tâluq.

The Ganga kings of Orissa or Kaḷinga, also called Gajapatis or elephant lords, beginning with Chôḷa-Gaṅga, held the sovereignty of that country down to 1534, soon after which it feel a prey to the Muhammadans.

Rashtrakutas.

The first inscription under this head is the Maṇṇe plates of Prabhûtavarsha Gôvinda-Râja-Dêva, of 802 (Nl 61) It begins with the mention of Krishṇa-Râja or Vallabha, who drew forth the Lakshmî of sovereignty from the great ocean the Châḷukya family. His son was Dhôra, for whom Lakshmî passed over his elder (brother). He for a long time bound Ganga, who had never been conquered by others; hemmed in Pallava between his own force on one side and the sea on the other, so that he had to surrender and deliver up his huge elephants; Vatsa-Râja, who had seized the Gauḍa kingdom, he drove into the impassable desert (Maru or Marwâr) and took away from him the pair of white state umbrellas which belonged to Gauḍa. He had also the names

[1] For a grant of the time of Vajrahasta, issued from Kalinganagara, where (as in our inscription) he was a worshipper of Gôkarna-svâmi on the Mahêndra mountain, see Ep. Ind. iii, 220.

[3] Instead of this and the following name, two grants have Vajrahasta (III) 40 (or 44), while Guṇḍama is said to have ruled years, and Kâmârṇava (IV) 35. Vajrahasta (V) is also given 33 years.

Nirupama and Kali-Vallabha. His son was Gôvinda-Râja, through whom the Râshṭrakûṭa line was raised above all rivalry. While yet Yuvarâja, his father, in consideration of his handsome form and great ablity, had offered to give up the throne to him. But he dutifully declined, saying—"Father, let your rank and sovereignty remain." When his father had gone to svargga, he, though only one, successfully contended with twelve famous kings who with great ferocity attempted to wrest the kingdom from him. He released Ganga from the burden of his cruel chains and sent him to his own submissive country, but on his showing a return of hostility, before the brow was wrinkled in a frown, he was again subdued and swiftly bound. Through fear of him Gurjjara disappeared somewhere; the Mâḷava chief, who was a learned man but too weak to withstand so powerful an opponent, found it politic to submit to him. The king Mârasarvva, in his camp in the Vindhya mountains, hearing from the spies that he had come there, thought it must be Dhruva, and hastened to appease him by casting himself at his feet with heirlooms never before obtained by others. Passing the rainy season at S'rîbhavana, the king next came to the bank of the Tungabhadrâ, where Pallava paid up in full the tribute due from him. At half a word by a letter-bearer, the Vengi king, wherever he was, instantly hastened to do him service, and built for him an outer wall of great height. Hostile kings threw themselves at his feet, valuing their security there above that of the priceless jewels in their crowns.

By him, Prabhûtavarsha Gôvinda-Râja-Dêva, meditating on the feet of (his father) Dhârâvarsha-Dêva, reflecting that this life is as unstable and transient as the wind or lightning,—through his elder brother S'aucha-Kambha-Dêva, with another name Raṇâvalôka, who had accepted the command of Prabhûtavarsha,—on the application of the son (not named[1]) of Bappayya, who was a disciple of Prabhâchandra, the disciple of Pushpasenâcharyya, who was of the Koṇḍakundânvaya and Udâra-gaṇa, living in the S'âlmalî village, famous in the Taidat-vishaya,—the king Nirupama-Dêva Prabhûtavarsha,—for the Jina temple erected in the western quarter of Mânya-pura (see above, p 4) by the victorious ruler S'rîvijaya-Râja on whom he had conferred a chief-ship—from his victorious camp pitched at Mânya-pura, made a grant of the Pervvâḍiyûr village in the Eḍeḍiṇḍe-vishaya, and also a tithe (of the produce) of Paderiyûr.

Of the interesting items of historical information contained in this inscription, perhaps the most important is the supersession of Kambha by his younger brother, and his acceptance of a subordinate position under the latter. Their father Dhôra, Dhruva, Dhârâvarsha, or Nirupama, had himself superseded his elder brother Gôvinda, who, being addicted to sensual pleasures, was careless of his royal duties and allowed the sovereignty to slip into the hands of his younger brother.[2] In the present instance Gôvinda was specially selected by his father to succeed him on account of his splendid form and superior abilities. In fact the father had offered to abdicate in his favour, but Govinda dutifully declined, saying he was satisfied with being appointed the Yuvarâja or heir-apparent. But when, on the death of his father, he ascended the throne, the elder brother Stambha or Kambha (one being the Sanskrit and the other the Kannaḍa form of the same word), at the head of a confederacy of twelve kings, raised up a powerful rebellion against him. This he suppressed and, in the end, as stated in the inscription, Kambha submitted to his younger brother, and was reinstated with authority under him.

Of Kambha we have two other inscriptions in Mysore, both undated. The first, where he is called Kambharasa, and appears in the reign of Dhârâvarsha, governing the Ninety-six Thousand, that is Gangavâḍi or the kingdom of the Gangas, Dhârâvarsha, having resolved that his younger son Gôvinda imprisoned the Ganga king S'ivamâra II for so long, it would appear that he may have been actuated to take this step by a desire to compensate his elder son Kambha for his supersession by giving him the Ganga kingdom. The second inscription referred to is Sb 24 (vol ii). In this we have Raṇâvalôka śrî-Kambaiya, son of S'rîvallabha, ruling the kingdom of the earth (pṛithivî-râjyam geyye). Probably therefore it belongs to the period immediately following his father's death, when he was fighting to establish his claim to the throne. The present inscription, in which he had submitted to his younger brother, is therefore the latest of the three, and is dated 802. What command he now held is not stated, but probably he continued as viceroy of the Ganga territories to which he had been appointed by his father.

Among the exploits of Prabhûṭavarsha Gôvinda-Râja, he is said to have passed the rainy season at S'rîbhavana, wherever that was, and then came to the bank of the Tungabhadrâ, where Pallava paid up in full the tribute due from him. This incident is no doubt the one recorded in plates obtained by Sir Walter Elliot,[1] which state that Gôvinda Prabhûtavarsha, having conquered Dantiga, the ruler of Kanchi, when he came to receive his tribute, encamped on the bank of the Tungabhadrâ, and had some sport in spearing boars at the tîrtha called Râmêśvara, where he made a grant, apparently the renewal of one originally given by (the Châḷukya king) Kîrttivarmmâ. This Râmêśvara is an island in the Tungabhadrâ, midway between the junction of the Tunga and the Bhadrâ and Honnâli. See Hl 8, vol vii.

Next we have two inscriptions of the time of Akâlavarsha, Dv 42, 43. In the first, Gangarasa's son Gôvinda had been granted the government of the Saḷne Three Hundred and the Kuningil Five Hundred. The former is in later inscriptions called the Sanne-nâḍ, and the latter is the modern Kunigal. In Dv 43 we have one of Akâlavarsha's officers ruling Punnâḍ. This was a local circle called in DB 38 the Punnâḍ Seventy.[2] The old inscription Ht 12, which is in Haḷa-Kannaḍa characters but contains several Tamil words, is attributed to the time of a Kannaḍi-arasa. This may be a form of Kannara or Kandhara, that is Krishna (II), the name of the same Akâlavarsha.

In Ma 75 we have an undoubted inscription of Krishna III, dated 966. In it appears a Ganga-Bhîma, son of Ma.. da named Durvinîta, erecting a temple in the Maṇṇe country. When the town was plundered, Daḍiga, the eldest son of Ganga-Gachchi, who was nâḷ-gâvuṇḍa of the Maṇṇe Three Hundred, having been killed, a Daḍigêśvara temple was built to his memory.

Bn 37 is of the time when Indara was ruling. This may be the last of the Râshṭrakûṭas, who died at S'ravaṇa Beḷgoḷa in 982 as recorded in SB 57 (vol ii) and Si 27 (vol xii).

Pallavas.

Of the Pallavas who under the name of Noṇambas or Noḷambas ruled in the east and north Mysore, giving their name to the Noṇambavâḍi or Noḷambavâḍi Thirty-two Thousand province, account has been given in the Chitaldroog, Kolar, and Tumkur volumes.

We have here two inscriptions of the time of Mainda or Mahêndra, for whom the fixed date ed from Si 38 (vol xii) In Ht 9 he is said to be ruling the Ganga Six Thous was ruling as king (arasu gêye), and fighting Gangarasa or the Ganga king (not

f Ayyap-Dêva follows (Ht 14), and perhaps Ht 110 is also of DB 9 and Dv 10, dated 918 and 948. The son was Aṇṇig of the time of Iriva-Nolamba, the second of Ayyapa's sons, lso probably of his time. In this we have Chôḷa Noḷambâdhirâja in Bijayitamangala (now Betmangala) and Noḷambarasa was killed. This inscription is not dated, but in Ht 111 dated in 997 we have the Chôḷa king Râjarâja-Dêva ruling the kingdom, and the Noḷambas must have submitted to him, for Ayyapa-Dêva's son Gannarasa was ruling under him the province named Daḷigavâḍi or Daḍigavâḍi, called Taḍigaipâḍi or Taḍigaivaḷi in Tamil. It appears to have been in the north of the Bangalore District, and included other parts to the west (see Ng 67, vol iv, and Ma 75 above).

Kadambas.

The Kadambas are represented by a single record (Cg 57), of 1095. It mentions the death of Duddarasa, of whom an account is contained in Mj 18 (vol v) of the same date. The places he was ruling and the extent of his retinue are here given. In the Manjarabad inscription we have particulars of his father and his sons, especially Dayasimha, his successor. The family, though of interest from the descriptions, were apparently of no more than local importance.

Chalukyas.

There is only one inscription to be noticed under this head, and it is a peculiar one,[1] Bn 142. It records a grant by Vîra-Noṇamba-chakravartti of the Châḷukya family, ruling in Kalyâṇa-pura. The grant was made in the course of a victorious expedition, when he was in the Heñjeṟu village, in the S'aka year 366, to Mâra-Seṭṭi, described as a principal Gangavâḍikâra, a vaḍḍa-byavahâri (or senior merchant) of the Châḷukyas, for his successful attack on Kilva-Râya in the battle of Heñjeṟu. This place has been identified by me with Hemâvati on the northern border of Sîra taluq in Madaksîra, and is mentioned in several old inscriptions. The earlier form of the name is Peñjeru. In Tamil it appears as Peruñjeṟuvu (the great plain).

The plates are inscribed in Nandi Nâgarî characters (a special form of r being used to represent the Haḷa-Kannaḍa ṟ in Heñjeṟu), and the language is Sanskrit, except here and there in names which are in Kannaḍa form. The donor, Vîra-Noṇamba, can only be identified with the Châḷukya prince Jayasimha, who had that name, as stated in Sk 136 (vol vii), and in other places is called Noḷamba-Pallava-Permmânaḍi, being the son of a Pallava mother. Under his father Sômêśvara Trailôkyamalla Âhavamalla he was governor of various provinces (Hl 107, 119, vol vii). By the next king, his elder half brother Sômêśvara Bhuvanaikamalla, he was made governor of the Noḷamba-Sindavâḍi province (Sk 136). The other half brother, Vikramârka Tribhuvanamalla,—both these being the sons of a Ganga mother and taking all the Ganga titles,—on coming to the throne, made him Yuvarâja or heir apparent, and he won various important conquests for the kingdom. In 1080 he was ruling Banavase and other large provinces for his brother (Sk 293). But eventually he rebelled against him, and was defeated and imprisoned.

Whatever may be the explanation of its date, which is at least six hundred years too early,[2] this inscription has a special interest as being apparently the model on which the several Janamêjaya inscriptions—those of the Gauj and other agrahâras (see vol vii)—were framed.[3] It is said to have been written by the highly accomplished Odvâchâri,[4] and is signed,—like the Bêgûr and Kuppagaḍḍe agrahâra plates,—Ari-râya-mastaka-tala-prahâri, on which see vol. vii, Intro. 2.

[1] Originally published by me in 1879, Ind. Ant. VIII, 89.

[2] I have already pointed out (vol VII, Intro. 2) that the discrepancy between the S'aka and cyclic years is itself evidence that the date must be later than 909 A.D., and that whereas for S'aka 966 they agree, reckoning back for 366 they do not, owing to the former practice of casting out samvatsaras when two begin in the same solar year, described in Ind. Cal p. xxxviii.

[3] Parallel versions to show this were published by me in 1879 (Ind. Ant. VIII, 91).

[4] See remarks about Ikkuḍôja, vol XI. Intro. 11.

Other points to be noted in connection with this inscription are the epithets applied to the donee. He is called a mûlika-Gangavâḍikâra, or principal Gangavâḍikâra. This means a native of Gaṅgavâḍi, the kingdom of the Gangas in Mysore, and is the intermediate form of Gangaḍikâra, the name now of the existing largest section of ryots in Mysore, who represent the former subjects of Gangavâḍi. Of the Kilva-Râya whom he is said to have overcome in the battle of Heñjeṟu we have no other knowledge. A Kilvogodeyarasa-Dêva is mentioned in Dg 6 (vol. xi) as having ruled in the old royal city Hiriya Bêtûr, near Dâvangere. The grant of land was given accompanied with the same honours as those mentioned in the agrahâra plates before referred to.

Cholas.

There are about 50 Chôḷa inscriptions, of which 10 are in Kannaḍa and the rest in Tamil. The earliest is Ht 111 of 997, when Râjarâja-Dêva was ruling. It is in Kannaḍa, and is dated in the S'aka year, according to the prevailing custom in Mysore, and not only in the regnal year as was the Chôḷa practice. (The Noḷamba king) Ayyapa-Dêva's son Gannarasa was governing a part of Daḷigavâḍi (see above, p 13). No earlier Chôḷa inscription than this has been found in Mysore[1]. Of special interest is Cg 46, which records the creation of the Kongâḷva title by Râjakêsarivarmmâ, that is Râjarâja, in about 1005. A Panchava-mahârâya had gained some important advantage in the battle of Panasoge, and the emperor resolved to reward him with a title and a nâḍ. He accordingly invested him with a crown as Kshatriya-śikhâmaṇi Kongâḷva and gave him Mâlavvê, now Mâlambi, in Coorg. Further particulars will be found under Kongâḷvas. Several inscriptions follow, of the king's 23rd year, 1007. Cp 47 is in Kannaḍa characters but Tamil language, and contains the same historical introduction as Cp 128. The destruction of the ships at Kândaḷûr-S'âḷai, the conquest of Vengai-nâḍ, Gangapâḍi, Noḷambapâḍi, Taḍigaivaḷi, Kuḍa-malainâḍ, Kollam, Kaḷingam, Iḷa-maṇḍalam held by the stubborn Singaḷas, the Iraṭṭapâḍi Seven-and-a-half Lakh country, the archipelago of twelve thousand ancient islands, and the S'eḷiyar or Pâṇḍyas are mentioned. For description of these see the Kolar volume (x). All these inscriptions record grants for temples made by the local assembly of the agrahâra or chaturvêdimangalam. The Puṉganûr mentioned in Cp 130 and other places is Honganûr in Channapaṭṇa tâluq, which was the capital of Chikka Gangavâḍi.

Râjêndra-Chôḷa's inscriptions begin with Cp 42a and 135 of his 2nd year, 1013. Cp 42 details his conquest of Iḍaiṭurai-nâḍ, Vanavâśi, Kollippâkkai, and Maṉṉai; his capture of the crown of the king of Îḻam (Ceylon), the crown of his queen, the crown and necklace of Indra, which the king of the South (Pâṇḍya) had formerly surrendered to the kings of Îḻam, with the crown and garland of rubies which were heirlooms of the warlike Kêraḷa, and many ancient islands. This introduction is repeated in part in Kannaḍa characters in Cp 43. Ht 10 is also in Kannaḍa.

Nl 1, a Kannaḍa inscription, of this king's 18th year, 1029, is of much interest. The Kô-Parakêsarivarmma Râjêndra-Chôḷa-Dêva is described as the Oḍeyar who was ruling Gange (the Ganga territories), the East country, and Kaḍâram (in Burma). Vâmana, a daṇḍanâyaka of Yuddhamalla-Dêva, erected a temple of Siddhêśvara in memory of his guru Mauni-bhaṭṭâraka, and endowed it. We learn that it was situated in Daḍigavaḷi which was Vikramachôḷa-maṇḍala. Of special interest is the statement that the writer of the śâsana was a son of the mahâmâtra Ajavarmmaya. The mahâmâtras were officials appointed in the time of Aśôka, the 3rd century B.C., and I do not recollect meeting with the term in later inscriptions before this one. The composer, Puṇyaśarmma, is described as emperor (or master) of śâsana expressions.

[1] There is indeed Mb 203 (vol. X) of perhaps 934, but this is doubtful. There is no reason to suppose that the Chôḷas exercised any authority in Mysore so early. It is quite an isolated inscription, and may belong to a later period, the time of Râjêndra-Chôḷa. In any case, it is only just within the eastern border of the State.

The descent of the guru commemorated is farther given. It begins with Adhinâtha, who took up his station at the root of a sacred tree in Chandrapuri, situated by the Western Ocean. His disciple, waited on by kings, was Chchâyâdhinâtha, whose son was Stambhanâtha. His son was Dvîpanâtha, whose disciple, invincible as a disputant, was Mauninâtha, whose disciple Rûpaśiva-paṇḍita was placed in charge of the temple. A farther grant for it is recorded in Nl 37 in 1033.

An elaborate account of the king's exploits is contained in Cp 82, 83, of his 23rd year, 1034. In addition to the conquests and acquisitions above mentioned, he is said to have obtained the crown of pure gold which Paraśurâma had deposited for security in the inaccessible S'ântima island. He moreover acquired the Iraṭṭapâḍi Seven-and-a-half Lakh country, and the fame of putting to flight Jayasingan (the Châḷukya king); who through fear disgracefully turned his back at Muyangi and hid himself; also S'akkaragoṭṭam (Chakrakoṭṭa), the Madurai country, Nâmaṇaiykkôṇai, Panjappaḷḷi, and Mâśuṇi-dêśam. In a great battle at Âdinagaravai, he captured Indira-iratan of the Lunar race, with all his treasures and relations. He also took Oṭṭa-vishaiyam (Orissa), Kôsalainâḍ, Taṇḍabutti where he slew Danmapâla in a fierce battle; Dakkaṇa-Lâḍam where he attacked Iraṇaśûran; Vangâla-dêśam from which Gôvindaśandan fled on foot, dismounting from his horse; frightened Mayipâḷa of S'angoṭṭal in battle, and seized his mighty elephants, his women and treasures; Uttira-Lâḍam and even the Gangai (or Ganges). He sent many ships over the sea and captured S'angirâma-Viśaiyôttungapaṇman, the king of Kiḍâram, together with his fine elephants and trophies consisting of the Vichchâdira-tôraṇam at the war gate, and doors set with large jewels. He also took S'rîvijaiyam, Pannai, Malaiyûr, Mâyiruḍingam (an island), Ilaṅgaśôbam, Mâ-Pappâḷam (in the Andaman islands), Mêvilipaṅgam, Valarppaṇḍûr, Kulaittakkôlam, Mâḍamaḷingam, Ilâmuri-dêśam, Mâ-Nakkavâram (the Nicobar islands), and Kiḍâram (in Burma). These conquests are again recounted in Nl 7, of the 27th year, 1038. The last of his inscriptions is Ht 142, of the 32nd year, 1043.

We then come to Râjâdhirâja-Dêva. Dv 75 is of his 29th year, 1046. He ruled for a considerable time along with his father (see Nl 25). He is said to have given crowns to his father's younger brother, his own elder brothers, and his sons,[1] calling them Vânavan (the Chêra king), Vallavan (the Châḷukya king), Mînavan (the Pâṇḍya king), Gangan (the Ganga king), Ilangai (the Ceylon king), Pallavan (the Pallava king), and Kannakuchchi (the Kanyakubja king),[2] bestowing upon them the dominions of those kings. He seems to have been of a bloodthirsty disposition and did not spare the captive kings, but cut off on the battle-field the head of the Pâṇḍya king Mânâbaraṇan, which was never without a golden crown set with large jewels; had Vîra-Kêralan trampled to death by his furious elephant Ativâraṇa; sent Sundara-Pâṇḍiyan flying from the battle-field to Mullaiyûr with dishevelled hair and weary feet, with the loss of his state umbrella, his big fans made from the tail of the yak, and his throne; despatched the king of Vênâḍ to heaven; ruined the three kings of Irâmakum; destroyed at Kândalûr-S'âlai on the coast the ships of Villavan (the Chêra king), who had fled from his dominions and hidden himself; terrified Âhavamalla (the Châlukya king) by destroying his army, capturing his fine elephants, and making his bravest leaders retreat like cowards; burnt Koḷḷipakkai; openly seized the jewelled crown of Nigaḷa-Vikramabâhu, king of Ilangai; when Vîra-S'alâmêgan invaded the country from Îlam (or Ceylon), drove him off disgraced, took his elder sister and his wife prisoners, cut off the nose of his mother, and when he turned to revenge them, slew him on the battle-field and seized his golden crown set with large jewels. He also took the crown of S'rîvallavan Madanarâja, king of Îlam, who was a descendant of Kannaran (? Râshṭrakûṭa king) ; led his army a second time to the north, chased away Gaṇḍan, Dinakara-Nâraṇan, Gaṇavati and Madisûdanan, and burnt the palace of the S'aḷikkiyar (Chaḷukyas) at Kampili. The tribute paid by the Villavar (Chêras), Mînavar (Pâṇḍyas), S'aḷikkiyar (Chaḷukyas), Vallavar (Pallavas), Kôśalar, Vangaṇar, Konganar, S'iṅtukar, Ayyaṇar, S'iṅgalar, Pangalar and Aṇtarar (Aṇdhras), together with the revenue he obtained from one-sixth share of the produce of the land, he distributed among the Brahmans. Finally he performed the horse-sacrifice, and seated himself on the throne with the name Jayangoṇḍa-Chôḷa.

[1] These are not here named, but their names will be found in Bn 108.

[2] This refers apparently to a king of Ceylon who was a native of Kanyakubja.

Nl 25 is of his 33rd year, 1050. His umbrella is said to be planted under the shadow of the umbrella of his father, who had conquered Gangai (Mysore) in the north, Ilangai (Ceylon) in the south, Mahôdai (Cochin) in the west, and Kaḍâram (Burma) in the east. Some of the king's conquests above mentioned are repeated, but it is added that he killed the king of ? Stangam[1] on the battle-field. Nl 38c describes him as having taken off the head of Pâṇḍiyan, and captured the Sâlai of Kêralan, Ilangai, and Iraṭṭapâdi (Raṭṭavâḍi). Nl 76 of the same year recounts many of the conquests mentioned above, with some variations and additions. Thus it is said that of the three kings of the South (the Pâṇḍyas), the rulers of Kanni, he sent two to heaven and one to the forests ; captured the father and mother of Vijjayan who fled from the battle in fright ; sent back the valiant warriors whom Âhavamalla had put forward to oppose him, with 'Âhavamalla is a coward' clearly written on their breasts ; subdued the people of S'iṛu-turai, Perun-turai, and Umâdi-turai ; routed in battle ... nnan, Kâḷidâsan, S'âmuṇḍan of Vi . peruntur, Kommayan, and...lava-mârâjan ; punished S'anjakairavan for allowing Tammuḍi to take refuge with him ; burnt Iraṭṭapâḍi and took possession of the beautiful Seven-and-a half Lakh country.

Bn 108 is an inscription of Râjêndra-Dêva, younger brother of Râjâdhirâja. He claims to have bestowed crowns on the same relatives, but names them. His father's younger brother was Gaṅgaikoṇḍa-S'ôḷan, with the title Immaḍi-S'ôḷan ; his own younger brothers were Mummaḍi-S'ôḷan, with the title S'ôḷa-Pâṇḍyan ; Vîra-S'ôḷan, lord of Kôḷi (Uraiyûr or Warriore near Trichinopoly), with the title Karikâla-S'ôḷan ; Madurântakan, with the title S'ôḷa-Gangan ; and Parânta-Dêvan, with the title S'ôḷa-Ayyôddhyarâjan. He also gave crowns to his sons Irâjêndira-S'ôḷan, with the title Uttama-S'ôḷan ; Muḍigoṇḍa-Sôḷan, with the title S'ôḷa-Janakarâjan ; and Iraṭṭapâḍikoṇḍa-S'ôḷan, with the title S'ôḷa-Vallaban. Also on his son's sons Madurântakan, with the title Sundara-S'ôḷan ; Anaichchevagan, with the title Nirupêndra-S'ôḷan. When attacked by the Châḷukya Âhavamalla at the great Koppam tîrtha, though severely wounded and having lost many of his principal officers, he slew Châḷukya's younger brother Jayasinga, Pulakêśi, Daśapanman, Aśôkan, Araiyan, Moṭṭayan, Nanni-Nulambam, and other princes without number. Whereupon the terrified Châḷukya fled, along with his princes Rêvan, Tuttan, Gaṇḍamayyan and others.[2] The rest of the inscription is gone. This battle at Koppam, a place which has not been satisfactorily identified,[3] seems to have been of a most sanguinary and disastrous character. The Chôḷa king Râjâdhirâja was slain, Râjêndra his younger brother took his place and was severely wounded, but succeeded in the end in making the Châḷukya king Âhavamalla, who had lost many of his bravest supporters, retreat in disorder. A

[1] From CB 21, Vol X, it seems that this should be Kaḷingam.

[2] For identification of some of the persons named, see So. Ind. Ins. III, 58.

[3] It s described as a great tîrtha or distinguished holy place on the Perâru or big river, a name generally applied to the Krishna. Kuppam on the Pâlâr in the south east of Mysore has been suggested (So. Ind. Ins. I, 134) and Koppa on the Tunga in the Kadur District of Mysore (id. II, 232). But neither of these has a reputation as a tîrtha. On the other hand, Koṇana in the south west of the Nizam's Dominions, now called Kopal, near the Tungabhadra, is always spoken of as a great tîrtha (see SB Inscriptions ; also Cg 45 in this volume), and in connection with the invasion of Belvola, which is in Dharwar, seems more likely to be the place. The p would naturally be doubled in Tamil.

Châḷukya inscription at Aṇṇigere in Dharwar district[1] says that the wicked Chôḷa (i. e. Râjâdhirâja) had penetrated into the Beḷvola country and burned the Jain temples erected by Ganga-Permâḍi, but that he eventually yielded his head to (the Châḷukya king) Sômêśvara (i. e. Âhavamalla) in battle, and forfeited his life.

In Ht 36 we have an inscription of Râjamahêndra-Dêva, but it contains no historical information.

Nl 24 brings us to Vîrarâjêndra-Dêva, who is said to have plundered some enemy and frightened Âhavamalla. But Cp 85, of his 4th year, 1066, contains a long account, much broken by gaps. He routed an army which had been sent against him into Vengai-nâḍ (the Eastern Châḷukya territory); when Vikkaḷan and S'iṅgaṇan (the Western Châḷukyas Vikrama and Jayasimha) met him in battle at Kûḍal-Sangamam on the impetuous river (the junction of the Tungabhadrâ and Krishnâ) hoping to wipe out the disgrace of their former defeat, he gained the victory. He overcame S'iṅgan of Kôśalai, Kêtaraiyan, Mâraiyan, Irâśayan and others; and when Maduvaṇan fled, along with the other chiefs who had dismounted from their elephants, Âhavamalla also fled, leaving his wives, family treasures, fine elephants, banners, and other valuable spoils to the victor. The names of elephants captured are given. His queen was Ulaga-muḻud-uḍaiyâḷ. He cut off on the battle-field the heads of the king of Pottappi, of Vâraṇ, Kêralan, and Jananâta's brother; had the king of the South (Pâṇḍya), S'rîpallava's son S'iṟuvan, and Vîrakêsari trampled to death by elephants; drove by means of his elephants the family of the S'engiraiyas and S'êralas into the western ocean; subdued the Iraṭṭas and captured their elephants; in a fresh battle cut off the heads of the daṇḍanâyakas Val ..., Vanjipayyan, Piramadêvan, Baṇḍâra-Tôraiyan, S'attiyaṇṇan, Pattiyaṇṇan, Vîmanayan, and Vaṅgâraṇ; also of the Ganga, Nuḷamba, Kâḍava, and Vaidumba kings, and returned to his great city Gangai (perhaps Gangaigoṇḍâ-S'ôḷapuram) near the great river. Dv 14, of his 5th year, 1067, merely says that he frightened Âhavamalla, and made Vikkaḷan and S'iṅgaṇṇan turn their backs.

Kulôttunga-Chôḷa-Dêva comes on the scene in Ht 101, which is of his 6th year, 1075, and the inscriptions run up to Kn 12, his 49th year, 1118. The fullest account of him is contained in Cp 77, of his 17th year, 1086. This says that when he was still Yuvarâja, he first wedded the goddess of Victory by his heroic deeds at S'akkaragoṭṭam (Chakrakôṭa), and captured troops of elephants at Vayirâgaram. He put to flight the Kuntaḷa army, and put on the garland of victory over the North; freed the goddess of the South from being common property, and the goddess of the country whose garment is the Ponni (or Kâvêrî) from being lonely. His white umbrella shone like moonlight all over the wide earth, and his tiger banner fluttered on mount Mêru. Many rows of elephants stood before him, sent as tribute by kings of remote islands, while outside his splendid capital lay the head of the runaway Pâṇḍya king, pecked by kites. He inflicted a total defeat on Vikkaḷan (the Châḷukya) who had threatened to disfigure his glory as one of the Solar race (the Chôḷas) with marks like those on the moon, the emblem of his ancestral family (the Eastern Châḷukyas),[2] —forcing him to retire in disorder to the west, his retreat being marked by dying elephants all the way from Nangili (in the east of the Kolar District) to Manalûr (in Channapaṭṭa tâluq) and as far as the Tungabhadrâ. The passage of his hosts bent the backs of the mountains, caused the rivers to breach their banks, and the seas to be agitated. By this victory the Chôḷa acquired the two countries Ganga-maṇḍalam and S'iṅgaṇam. He then resolved to take Pâṇḍi-maṇḍalam.

[1] Dr. Fleet's Kan. Dyn. 441.

[2] His father was of the race of the Moon,—an Eastern Châḷukya, and his mother of the race of the Sun,—a Chôḷa.

When his armies marched forth for this purpose, it was as if the northern ocean was about to overflow the southern ocean. The five Panjavas (Pâṇḍyas) fled in terror to the forests. These he destroyed, planted pillars of victory in all directions, took possession of the pearl fisheries, the Podiyil-mountain, where the three forms of Tamil (prose, poetry and the drama) flourished, the central S'ayyam (the Sahya mountains) where elephants are captured, the (rivers) Kanni and Gangai. He established colonies in all parts of the conquered country as far as Koṭṭâṟu. He then seated himself on the throne only for the receipt of tribute, accompanied by his queen Puvani-muḻud-uḍaiyâḷ.

Nl 3, 38*a* and Kn 12, of his 41st, 42nd and 49th years, say that he caused the wheel of his authority to roll over all regions, so that the Villavar (Chêras) became disconcerted, the Mînavar (Pâṇḍyas) lost their position, and the other kings retreated with disgrace. His queen is here called Avani-muḻud-uḍaiyâḷ. The last is a memorial to a man who was killed by a tiger, on which his wife entered the fire (and was burnt with his body).

An 74 may be of the time of Kulôttunga-Chôḻa II, whose name seems to have been adopted by a chief named Kaśava-Dêvar. Nothing more is known of the latter, who is said to be ruling the earth.

Nl 88 is in honour of Kencha-Sôma, called the Chôḻa-Râya of the Kaḻi age, on whose anniversary day 12000 Oḍeyars or Lingâyit priests were to be fed in the temple of Gangâdhara (on the S'ivaganga hill). This is a testimony to the rapid spread of the Lingâyit religion, which was established in the time of the Kaḻachurya king Bijjaḻa-Dêva (1156—1167), and is expressly said to have been embraced within 60 years of his time from Ulavi (near Goa) to Shôḻapur, and from Bâḻehaḻḻi (Koppa tâluq) to S'ivaganga.

Bn 96 is dated S'aka 1223, Bahudhânya, which do not agree. It professes to be of the time of a Vîra-S'aiva Vîra-Pratâpa Chôḻa-Râya, who has the imperial titles, but among others is master of the four oceans, an epithet of the Vijayanagar kings. Payments were assigned by merchants for a god who is said to have appeared to Kaḻikâḻa-Chôḻa. Certain Telugu branches of Chôḻas or Chôḍas claim descent from him, and this ruler may have belonged to some of them.

Vaiḍumbas.

In Ma 80 is a reference to Vaiḍumba-gâvuṇḍa's son Mayya .....An account of the Vaiḍumbas has been given in the Kolar District volume.

Kongâḻvas

These rulers were brought to notice in the Hassan volume (v), as ruling in the Arakalgûḍ tâluq during the 11th century. But from the Coorg inscriptions in the present volume we gain much farther important information regarding them. They were Jains, and also ruled over the Yêḻusâvira (or Seven Thousand) district of Coorg, which forms the northern arm of that country, adjoining Arkalgûḍ on the west.

The creation of the title seems to be related in Cg 46. It is there said that the great Chôḻa king Râjakêsarivarmma Permmânaḍigal (Râjarâja), on hearing how a certain Panchava-mahârâya had fought without ceasing in the battle of Panasoge (Yedatore tâluq) and annihilated the enemy, resolved to bestow on him a crown and give him a nâḍ. Accordingly, when he appeared before the king, the latter bound on him a crown with the title Kshatriya-śikhâmaṇi Kongâḻva and gave him Mâḻavvi (now Mâḻambi in Coorg).[1] Panchava-mahârâya appears to be a recognized Pâṇḍya designation. But of this Panchava-mahârâya we have an inscription at Balmuri (Sr 140, vol iii) dated 1012, in which he is described as a bee at the lotus feet of Râjarâja, and is said to have been invested by him with the rank of mahâ-daṇḍanâyaka for Bengi-maṇḍala (the Eastern Châḷukya territory) and Ganga-maṇḍala (the Ganga territory in Mysore). He then claims to have led an expedition throughout the western coast region, in the course of which he seized Tuḷuva (S. Kanara), and Koṅkaṇa (N. Kanara), held Malaya (Malabar), and put to flight Chêramma (the king of Cochin or Travancore), after which he pushed aside Teluga and Raṭṭiga (countries to the north of Mysore), and desired to have even the little Belvola country (in Dharwar and Belgaum districts). Another inscription (Sr 125) gives him the cognomen Râjêndra-Chôḷa.

[1] A district called Kshatriya-s'ikhâmani-valanâḍ is mentioned in inscriptions of the 11th century (Cp 82, Kl 109a, 112b), but its situation and the connection of the name are not known.

How he was connected with the subsequent Kongâḷva kings is not clear. But we find from the Coorg inscriptions that Râjêndra-Chôḷa-Kongâḷva's son was Râjâdhirâja-Kongâḷva (Cg 38), who, and his mother Pôchabbarasi, had as their guru Guṇasêna-paṇḍita, who was the disciple of Pushpasêna-siddhânta-dêva (Cg 35,37,38), and died in 1064 (Cg 34). In 1058 a Râjendra-Kongâḷva appears (Cg 35), presumably Râjâdhirâja-Kongâḷva's son. In 1070 Râjêndra-Pṛithuvî-Kongâḷva (perhaps the same) was ruling (Cg 50), and in 1077 his queen Padmala-Dêvî died (Cg 43).

From Mj 43 and Ag 76 (vol v) we know that the Kongâḷva king Râjêndra-Pṛithuvî attacked the Poysaḷa king Nṛipa-Kâma in 1022, and claims to have gained a victory over Poysaḷa in 1026 Apparently he was the Adaṭarâditya whose titles are given at length in Ag 99 of 1079.

A Vîra-Chôḷa-Koṅgâḷva appears in Cg 33 of ?1115, making a grant of the customs-dues of the Muḷḷu-nâḍ Seventy, the country around Muḷḷûr near S'anivârsante. This is the latest date for the rule of the Kongâḷvas, who disappeared on the expulsion of the Chôḷas from Mysore by the Hoysaḷas at that time. But Cg 39 shows that in 1390 some Jain priests restored the basadis at Muḷḷûr, and that a Kongâḷva-Suguṇi-Dêvî made grants for them. These are still continued.

Changâlvas

This line of kings was first made known in the Mysore volume, Part II (iv) and farther particulars were given in the Hassan volume (v). The Coorg inscriptions in the present volume enlighten us still more as to their history and show the important part they played in that country.

On the overthrow at the beginning of the 11th century of the Gangas, to whom they were subordinate, they came under the dominion of the Chôḷas, who, in accordance with their usual policy, imposed Chôḷa names upon the kings. When the Chôḷas were driven out of Mysore by the Hoysaḷas, early in the 12th century, the Changâḷvas seem to have made an effort to gain independence. But, following on various earlier contests with the Hoysaḷas, Nârasimha I of the latter line is said (Ng 76, vol iv) to have slain Changâḷva in battle before 1145, and captured his elephants, horses, gold and new jewels. The representative of the family then retired southwards into Coorg, where an expedition was sent against him by Ballâla II under Beṭṭarasa. This Hoysaḷa general (see Hs 20) utterly ruined the Changâḷva king Mahadêva in a battle at Pâḷpare (in the Kiggatnâḍ tâluq of Coorg) in about 1174, and built a city there for himself as the seat of his government. But before long he was attacked by the Changâḷva king Pemma Vîrappa, who was assisted, it says, by the Koḍagas (or Coorgs) of all the nâḍs. This statement is of special interest as being the earliest express mention of the Coorgs that has been met with in inscriptions. Though victory at first inclined to the Changâḷvas, they were finally defeated and thenceforward became subject to the Hoysaḷas.

Subsequently, in 1252, the Hoysaḷa king Sômêśvara paid them a visit at Râmanâthapura, as related in Ag 53 (vol v). At that time the Changâḷvas had as their capital S'rîrangapaṭṭaṇa,— which was not Seringapatam, but the place now known as Koḍagu-S'rîrangapaṭṭaṇa, which is in Coorg, to the south of the Kâvêrî, near Siddapur.[1] The Mallidêva and his son Hariharadêvarasa of Cg 54, 55 and 59, the latter called in Cg 45 Hariharadeva-Chôḷadêva, may be associated with the Malidêvarasa of Bl 89 (vol v), the date of which is 1280.

After the overthrow of the Hoysaḷa power in the next century by Muhammadan invasions from the North, the Changâḷvas appear as if for a time independent. But meanwhile, like many of the old Jain rulers, they had embraced the Lingâyit form of the S'aiva religion, and adopted as their family god Annadâni Mallikârjuna, of the Beṭṭadpura hill in Hunsur tâluq, which they called S'rîgiri, perhaps with reference to the celebrated S'rîparvata, the great S'aiva sacred place in the Kurnool district. According to Cg 51 there was a king named Annadâni, and after him the temple may have been named.

At the beginning of the 16th century Nanja-Râja founded their new capital Nanjarâjapaṭṭaṇa, to the west of the Kâvêrî, towards Fraserpet, and it still gives its name to the northern tâluq of Coorg. They also from this time call themselves Râjas of Nanjarâjapaṭṭaṇa or Nanjarâyapaṭṭaṇa, and were apparently subordinate to Vijayanagar. Piriya-Râja or Rudragaṇa, at the end of the century, rebuilt the town called after him Piriyapaṭṭaṇa,—the Periapatam of the English histories,—in Hunsur tâluq.

But the authority of the Vijayanagar empire was now on the wane, and in 1607 the Vijayanagar Viceroy at Seringapatam, no doubt foreseeing the trend of events, made a grant of the Malalavâḍi country (Hunsur taluq) to Rudragaṇa, in order—it is said—that the worship of the god Annadâni Mallikârjuna should not fail as long as the Nanjarâyapaṭṭaṇa kings of the Changâḷva family continued (Hs 36). They lasted however but little longer, and after a rule of at least six centuries the Changâḷva line was brought to an end in 1644 with the capture by the Mysore army of Piriyapaṭṭaṇa, in defence of which the last king was slain.

Hoysalas

The Hoysaḷa inscriptions number 203, of which as many as 92 are in Tamil, which had been the official language under their predecessors the Chôḷas. The remainder are in Kannaḍa. I cannot discover any rule as to the use of the two. They are indiscriminately employed over the whole District, during the entire period. Few of the inscriptions contain anything of historical importance. The most elaborate is Bn 6, on large plates, finely engraved in Nâgarî characters, and giving in Sanskrit the history down to the time of Sômêśvara[2].

But first may be noticed Nl 84, in which a Biṭṭi-Dêva, Vishṇu-sâmanta or Vishṇuvarddhana, of the Adaḷa-vaṁśa and Mitra-kula (or Solar race), erected the Gangâdharêśvara temple on the S'ivaganga mountain and endowed it. He also made a Brahmêśvara temple and Brahmasamudram village in the name of his father, besides Jinâḷayas and Adaḷêśvara temples, the Vishṇusamudra tank, a Bôchasamudra tank in the name of his mother, and endowed a temple of Kêśava. This family of chiefs has been met with in connection with Kaydâla in the Tumkûr tâluq (Tm 9). There they are described as lords of Mânyakhêḍa-pura (the Râshtrakûṭa capital, now Malkhêd in the south-west of the Nizam's Dominions), and Gangaputras, ruling Marugare-nâḍ. They were unusually liberal-minded and were patrons, it says, of the four creeds,—that is, the Jaina, Bauddha, S'aiva and Vaishṇava,—though nothing is mentioned which they did for the second, probably considered to be included in the Jaina. The present inscription is the earlier, being evidently of the time of the Hoysaḷa king Biṭṭi-Dêva or Vishṇuvarddhana.

The copper plates Bn 6, above referred to, contain a fine and interesting inscription. Their date is 1253, and they record the formation of an agrahâra called Sômalâpura by the king Sômêśvara-Dêva as a memorial on the death of his queen Sômalâ-Dêvî. It was situated in the Kalukaṇi-nâḍ, but where the plates were obtained is not known.[1] They have long been in the Bangalore Museum.

At the beginning, the composer, whose name is unfortunately not given, beseeches with folded hands his tongue to display its courage in publishing the praises of the kings of the Lunar race,—and adds, but the celebration of the victorious deeds of kings is so pleasing a task to thee, why should I implore thee?

After describing in a learned and original manner the birth, from the lotus of Vishṇu's navel, of Brahma, from whom sprang Atri, and from the eye of the latter, Chandra (the Moon),—the Yadu race derived from it is introduced, in which was the king named Sala. The story is related of his killing the tiger (of which there is a terrific description) on the muni's exclamation of hoy Sala, whence the kings of his line took their name. The tiger went to svarga, but as if from desire to witness their triumphs, its form became fixed on their banner. The line of kings is detailed as usual, with descriptions of each. Ballâḷa's queen was Padmalâ, and they had a son Nârasimha and a daughter Sômalâ. Among Nârasimha's exploits he is said to have offered up as if in sacrifice Vikramapâlâ, Pâmsa, Makara, and the fierce Hoysâryama, the fruit of the sacrifice being the setting up of Chôḷa. His son was Sôi-Dêva, whose valour is praised at length.

Then follows the notice of a king named Chiddarasa, of the Bhâradvâja-kula and Sôma-vaṁśa, whose wife was the famous Vuḍanâchi. They had a beautiful daughter named Sômalâ, whom the king Sôma took for his crowned queen. On her death, the king Sômêśvara, then living in the great capital named Vikramapura,[2] which he had created for his pleasure in the Chôḷa-maṇḍala that he had conquered by the might of his own arm, resolved to make a grant to ensure the final happiness of his queen Sômalâ-Dêvi. Accordingly, on the occurrence of an eclipse of the sun, after hearing a discourse on the merit arising from gifts at such a time, he made a grant of Madanapalli and Mattikaṭṭa, situated in the Kalukaṇi-nâḍ, as an agrahâra of 70 shares, renaming the places Sômalâpura. Of the shares, 62 were given to Brahmans, and the remainder for recitation of the vêdas, the god he had set up, and a tank. The final benediction is of interest, and the grant is signed śrî-Vîra-Sômêśvara-Dêvasya.

Kn 80, of 1265, informs us that Honganûr (in the Channapaṭṇa tâluq) was the capital of a Chikka-Gangavâḍi province, and the residence of a governor. In Cp 183 Hiriya-Gangavâḍi is mentioned.

Db 31, of 1267, is of special interest on account of the idolatrous symbols at the top having been removed, in order to make room for an inscription in Persian, of the time of the Mughal emperor Aurangzeb, 1691. In the Hoysaḷa portion we have the mahâ-maṇḍalêśvara Bêchi-Dêvarasa of the Bhangi-kula, with the title Lord of Nandagiri, as a local governor, with his residence at Yelahanka (to the north of Bangalore). The Vîra-Banañju merchants, with the long string of epithets usually applied to them, fixed certain dues to be paid on various articles of merchandise, to provide for the service of the god Gavarêśvara. The Mughal portion says that in the 32nd year of the reign of Aurangzeb Âlamgîr Bâdshâh the fort of Bâlâpura Kariyâtu was in the hands of the Sambâ family (referring no doubt to Sambhâji, the son of Shâhji, who received Kolâr, Bangalore, Dod-Ballâpur and other parts as a jâgîr from Bijâpur). Through the exertions of Khâsim Khân, Faujdar of the Karnâṭak Province of the Bijâpur Subah, it then passed from the hands of Sambâ-dûd, son of Sivâ-dûd Marhâṭṭa (Sivâji), and came into the possession of the Supreme Government. In the year 34 of the reign the fort was granted to Shekh Abdulla, known as Fârukh, renowned in India as a descendant of Shekh Farîd-ud-dîn Masaûd Chishti Alajrâmi, a resident of Badâyûn, a suburb of Chiṭṭûr in the capital city Shâhjahânâbâd or Dehli (Delhi). In the 30th year of the reign the stone had been brought with great care from the temple of Frâya,[1] distant 2 kôs north-east from the fort, and was intended for a building. But as it contained the grant of a charity, it was erected to perpetuate the memory of Shekh Abdulla.

[1] From Bl 74 (Vol. V) it appears that Kalukaṇi-naḍ was in the north of the Nâgamangala tâluq.

[2] It was near S'rirangam in the Trichinopoly District, and in also called Kannanûr in other inscriptions.

Kn 72, of 1277, gives a brief genealogy of the kings, and shows a great minister Kumâra-Dorabhakkare-daṇṇâyaka ruling over the eastern division of the kingdom. He made a grant for the temple at Maddûr, which is said to be in Chikka-Gangavâḍi.

There are a dozen inscriptions of the time of Râmanâtha-Dêva, the son to whom Somêśvara bequeathed the Tamil portion of his dominions, with the Kolar District and parts of the Bangalore District. They date from 1257 to 1294, are all in Tamil, and are confined to the north and east of this District. Two more, of 1297, belong to the 4th year of his son Viśvanâtha-Dêva. Kn 28, of 1292, shows Râmanâtha's forces making an incursion into Ballâḷa's kingdom. Cp 183 of 1294 and 179 of 1295 are to the same effect. It is clear, as stated in the Kolar volume, that towards the close of Râmanâtha's time an effort was being made to extend his authority over the portion of the Hoysala territory which did not belong to him. But these efforts were frustrated, for beyond the brief succession of Viśvanâtha no more is heard of this Tamil branch, and the kingdom was once more re-united under Ballâḷa III. The latter in 1301 issued orders in Tamil to the heads of maṭhas and temple priests in what were probably districts previously held by his rival, remitting all taxes, and confirming to them the villages granted to them as endowments.—See Bn 51, 65, Nl 38. The districts named are—the Hesar-Kundâṇi kingdom, Virivi-nâḍ, Mâśandi-nâḍ, Muraśa-nâḍ, Sokkanâyan-parṟu, Pennaiyâṇḍâr-maḍa-nâḍ, Aimbulugûr-nâḍ, Elavûr-nâḍ, Kuvaḷâḷa-nâḍ, Kaivâra-nâḍ, Ilaippâkka-nâḍ, and others (unnamed). Of these, Hesar appears in the name Hesar-ghaṭṭa, north-east of Nelamangala; Kundaṇi is west of Devanhalli, and there is reason to believe that Râmanâtha had a residence there; Morasu-nâḍ was in Kolar District; Kuvulâḷa is Kolar itself; Kaivâra has the same name still and is north-west of Kolâr; Ilaippâkka is the Tamil form of Yelahanka, north of Bangalore.

The principal other point to be noted in connection with the Hoysaḷas is the place of the royal residence under Ballâḷa III, during the troublous times of the Muhammadan invasions from the north. In 1318 it was Aruṇasamudra (Cp 73), but next year he was at Dôrasamudra (Cp 12). In 1328 he lived at Uṇṇâmale-paṭṭaṇa (DB 14, 18, Dv 1, Ht 124, and Dv 60, in this last called Uraṇṇâmale-paṭṭaṇa). The place intended is no doubt Tiruvuṇṇâmale or Trinomali in South Arcot).[2] In 1331 he is again at Aruṇasamudra (Cp 71). In 1333 he is at Hosabeṭṭa (Nl 9), next year at Dôrasamudra (Cp 7).

In 1339 he is specially described as sole king by his own valour (Ht 43), and had as his residence vîra-vijaya-Virûpâkshapura, his minister being Dâḍi Sômaya, who was related to him and appears

[1] It has been found impossible to identify this, and it is uncertain whether the name is meant for that of a god or of a village.

[2] This Uṇṇâmale appears as Tiruv-aṇṇâ malai in Tamil, and Aṇṇâmalai is given in the dictionary as a form of Arunâchala (the Śôṇas'aila of Vijayanagar inscriptions). Aruṇasamudra may therefore indicate some place in the same neighbourhood.

in a great many inscriptions of this period. In 1340 he performed an anointing to the kingdom (Bn 111), which must have been that of his son, who is called in Cm 105 (vol v) of 1343 Vîra-Virûpâksha-Ballâḷa-Dêva. The ceremony was therefore probably performed at Virûpâkshapura. What place this was is uncertain,[1] but it must have been in Mysore. In 1340 the king was also at Hosanâḍ[2] (DB 43), and then again at Uṇṇâmale (Bn 31, Dv 54), where he still was in 1342 (Bn 21, 24, 129, Ht 147, Dv 46). But in that year he again came to Virûpâkshapâda as it is called in Dv 21. Next year he was once more in Uṇṇâmale (Bn 41). The last Hoysaḷa inscription is Bn 120, of the date 1346.

Seunas.

The only apparent inscription of these kings is Cp 171 of 1291, when Mahadêvarasa was ruling the kingdom of the world. If this identification be correct, this is far to the east and south of their other inscriptions, and the date belongs to Râmachandra, the next king.

Nripatunga-kula.

Under this heading some inscriptions of a Vembi-Dêva were noticed in the Kolar volume (x, Intro. 33), and it was shown that he was of joint Ganga and Pallava descent. We have here two inscriptions of his time, both in Tamil. Dv 79 of 1257 describes him as ruler over three nâḍs, without specifying them. Dv 28 of 1283 gives him another name Nandi-Dêva. He made the Nandi-samudra tank near Koḍuvatti (still so called, at the south-east base of Nandidroog) in the north of Saṇṇai-nâḍ in the Nigarili-S'ôḷa-maṇḍalam, and granted the lands under it to 32 Brahmans to provide for the recital of the vêdas in the Nandîśvara temple.

Sigala-nad.

Of the rulers of this nâḍ there are several inscriptions, all in Kânkânhaḷḷi tâluq. The earliest are Kn 47 and 41, of 1295 and 1300, in which Mâra-Dêva was ruling, under Hoysaḷa-Ballâḷa-Dêva. He continues till 1319 (68) but in 1391 we have Mârappa's son Siddaya, subordinate to Vijaya-nagar. Under this power the chiefs, as named in the classified list, continued till 1633 (29).

Jiguni.

The rulers of this place in 1302 were subordinate to the Hoysalas (An 80). This inscription is in Tamil, and gives the name in the form S'uguṇi. In 1422 the chiefs were under the Vijayanagar king who was at Muḷuvâgil (Mulbâgal), but are described (An 79) as ruling the whole empire (sakala-sâmrâjyam mâḍuttiralu).

Kukkala nad.

The chiefs of this nâḍ are first mentioned in 1330 (Nl 12) under the Hoysaḷas. Their inscriptions are principally in Bangalore and Nelamangala tâluqs, and they had the title Naralôka-gaṇḍa. In 1340 they passed under Vijayanagar (Nl 19), and continued to 1430 (Bn 26).

Vijayanagar.

Of the large number of Vijayanagar grants, about 20 among the earlier ones are in Tamil, and one or two in Telugu. The majority do not contain any important historical information.

But Ma 18 of 1368 is of interest, being one copy of the so-called Râmânujâchâri inscription, the original of which is at S'ravaṇa Belgoḷa (SB 136). It records the reconciliation effected by Bukka-Râya between the Jains and the Vaishnavas in his kingdom. After a verse in praise of Râmânuja, it says that when Bukka-Râya was ruling, the Jains of all the nâḍs within Âneyagoṇḍi, Hosapaṭṭaṇa, Penugoṇḍe and Kalyaha made petition to him that the bhaktas (or faithful, the Vaishṇavas) were unjustly killing them (anyâyadalu kolluvadu).[1] Of the places here mentioned Âneguṇḍi is on the opposite side of the river to Vijayanagar, Penugoṇḍe is in Anantapur district, Kalyaha is the Kalya near Mâgaḍi where this inscription is. Hosapaṭṭaṇa (the new city) is not identified.[2] The four places may perhaps indicate the boundaries of the kingdom at that time. The king thereupon summoned before him representatives of the S'rî-Vaishṇavas of the Eighteen nâḍs (perhaps the divisions of the kingdom), including the chief Âchâryyas of Kôvil (S'rîrangam near Trichinopoly), Tirumale (Tirupati in N. Arcot), Perumâl-kôvil (Kanchi or Conjeevaram), and Tirunârâyaṇapura (Meluḳôṭe, north of Seringapatam), with the other members of the sect, as described,—and proclaiming that he would not countenance their unjust proceedings against the Jains or allow them to shelter themselves under the plea of religion,—passed the following decree ;—That to the Jains the use of certain musical instruments customary among them were to be confined to five bastis (not named), and disallowed in others. To the S'rî-Vaishnavas (here the inscription is effaced and illegible). The SB version says—The king having declared that between the Vaishṇava darśana and the Jaina darśana there was no difference whatever,—took the hand of the Jainas and placing it in the hand of the Vaishṇavas, issued his decree (which may be there consulted), and directed the S'rî-Vaishṇavas to have it set up in all the bastis throughout the kingdom.

Dv 81 of 1425 is one of the elaborate inscriptions on copper plates containing the genealogy of the kings from Sangama. The name of the composer is not given, and it contains original expressions and similes not found in the high-flown compositions of Sabhâpati. The grant of a village in the S'ivanasamudra-śîme of the Yalahakka (Yelahanka)-nâḍ was made to the famous and learned Sâlagrâma, whose name was Kêśava, the son of Aruṇâchalêśa-paṇḍita, head of the physicians.

DB 1 of 1510 says that Kṛishṇa-Râya's father Narasaṇṇa-Nâyaka had by the might of his arm gained possession of the Narapati throne, kingdom and land, and established a firm kingdom. Cp 153 of 1523 is another elaborate inscription on copper plates, giving an account (as previously published) of the earlier kings, and recording a grant by Kṛishṇa-Râya to Vyâsa-tîrtha, the disciple of Brahmaṇya-tîrtha, of a village in the Honganûr-sthaḷa of the Channapaṭṭaṇa-śîme of the Kelale-nâḍ. The village was renamed Brahmaṇyatîrthapuri by Vyâsatîrtha, who formed it into 32 shares, which he bestowed on his disciples. An interesting account of Vyâsatîrtha will be found in the Shimoga Part I volume (vii) at p 41 of the Introduction. DB 30 of 1530 is a similar style of grant, carrying on the history to Achyuta-Râya, and recording a grant by him to Venkaṭêśvara-yajva in the Hosakôṭa-śîme, which was in Morasa-nâḍ.

Nl 31 of 1533 mentions Hesarughaṭṭa, otherwise called the S'ivasamudra agrahâra which was in the S'ivanasamudra-śîme of the Elahanka-nâḍ, as the place where a big tank was formed in the Arkkavatî river. This is now the source of the Bangalore water-supply. Nl 42 of 1551 is a grant on copper plates by Tirumala-mahârâya, one of the three sons of S'rî-Ranga-Râya.

Cp 186 of 1558 is another copper plate grant, the composition, in his usual hyperbolic style, of Sabhâpati Svayambhu. Down to Achyuta-Râya it corresponds with DB 30. When he died, his son Venkaṭa-Dêva succeeded to the throne, but to the misfortune of his subjects he, too, shortly died.

[1] In the SB version the complaint is only anyâyangaḷu mâḍuvadu, doing injustice.

[2] CD 4 and 5 (Vol XI) say it was in the Hoysana country and the capital of Nijagali Kaṭaka-Râya. There is a Nijagal in Nelamangala tâluq, see Nl 65. Cf. the Hosavîḍu, Hosabeṭṭa, Hosanâḍ, etc., where the last Ballâla lived.

Sadâśiva-Râya, the son of Ranga-Râya and Timmâmbâ, was then anointed to the throne of the Vijayanagar empire by Râma-Râja—his sister's husband,—protector of the great Karṇâṭa kingdom, and by the chief ministers. The tears of joy shed at his coronation-anointing flooded the earth so as to make her appear as the queen who was anointed with him. The Kâmbhôja Bhôja Kâlinga Karahâṭa and other kings held the rank of servants in his female apartments. He made a grant to Tiruvenkaṭâyâchârya Then follows the genealogy of Râma-Râja. It is traced from Nanda, through Chaḷikka and Bijjalêndra, to Sômi-Dêva, who took seven hill-forts from his enemies. His son was Pinnama, the lord of Araviṭi-pura, whose son was Araviṭi Bukka. His wife was Ballâmbikâ, who bore Râma-Râja. to whom Lakkâmbikâ was wife. Their son was S'rî-Ranga-Râja, whose wife was Tirumalâmbikâ These had the three sons Râma-Râja, Tirumala-Râja and Venkaṭâdri-Râja. The grant was made on the application to Râma-Râja of Koṇḍa-Râja, son of Kônêṭi-Râja.

Yelahanka

There are several inscriptions of the Kempe Gauḍa chiefs of Yelahanka, who were a branch of the Âvati family and founded Bangalore. Two or three are in Telugu, and the dates run from 1367 to 1713. Bn 1 of 1628 contains a useful list of trading towns the merchants of which agreed to pay certain dues on their goods for the service of the Ranganâtha temple in Bengaḷûru. Bn 70 is probably of the Kempe Gauḍa period. It is inscribed at the base of the big bull in the Basavan-gudi or Bull temple, to the south of the Fort of Bangalore, which gives its name to the new extension of the City in that direction. The inscription states that the feet of the god there are the source of the Vṛishabhâvatî river, which runs to the west. It is an affluent of the Arkâvatî, which it joins a few miles north of Kânkânhaḷḷi.

Mahrattas

Of these rulers, Bn 30 mentions Viṭhalêśvara-Dêva in 1544. In Db 28 Sambhâji-Râya appears in 1647. Ten years later we have S'âhuji-Râja in Nl 69. Khâvana-Sâheb is mentioned in Cp 26 in 1660, and Bâlôji-Hâipati-Râya's son Duṇḍôji-Haipati-Râya in Cp 68 in 1661. Bn 137 gives us Rûpadêva-Râṇi's son Balleya-Râya-Râṇi in 1676. Ht 46 is of the time of Manukôji-Râja in 1727, Ht 53 and 55 of that of Aṇṇâji in 1728.

Sugaṭûr

The inscriptions here of the Sugaṭûr chiefs, of whom there is a notice in the Kolar volume, date from 1559 to 1693. They are all in the Hoskote and Anekal tâluqs. Ht 105 records the settlement of a dispute in Anekal between the S'eṭṭis and merchants on the one hand and the members of the phanas on the other regarding the streets through which their religious processions should pass. By the intervention of Venkaṭâchârya, guru of the Hosakôṭe-sthala, the matter was settled to the satisfaction of both parties, and certain dues were agreed to be paid to him that he might take up his residence permanently in Anekal.

A palm-leaf manuscript lately obtained gives the following account of the family. They attribute their rise in power to Sujñânamûrti, who was the guru of Dêvaya, their progenitor. The son of the latter was Tammappa-bhûpa, whose son was Chikka-Tammêndra, born with long matted hair. He broke the Turakas who assaulted Penugoṇḍa, and thus pleased the king of Karṇâṭaka, who gave him the title of Chiga-Râya[1] and the crest of a hawk. He was a devout adherent of the Jangamas, and by the grace of S'iva restored sight to a blind man. His wife was Vîramâmbikâ.

Their son was Irmmaḍi-Tamma-bhûpâla, also devoted to the Jangamas. He captured Bhîmâridurga, and destroyed certain traitors to the king of Karṇâṭaka, thus gaining his friendship and received from him the flags of a golden bull and Vîrabhadra. His wife was Venkaṭâmbâ. They had the son Mummaḍi-Ṭamma-bhûpa, who was learned in the Karṇâṭaka, Ândhra and Sanskrit languages. When quite a child (s'iśu) he wrote the Râjêndra-Chôḷa-charita. When his moustaches began to appear, he wrote the Kumârârjunîya, and when mature, the Saundarês'a charita. These were in Telugu. Then he composed an impromptu yaksha-gâna work in Kannaḍa. He also wrote in Sanskrit a commentary called Kaumudi-vyâkhyâna, and a work called Rasika-manôranjana, and had the S'iva-darpaṇa compiled by Brahmans. Then, by general request, he wrote this Kannaḍa version of the S'ankara-samhita.

Âvati

The Âvati chiefs have a number of inscriptions, the dates of which go from 1586 to 1729. They were founders of Doḍ-Ballâpur and Dêvanhaḷḷi and the inscriptions are in those tâluqs. Dv 15, 16 and 37 are elaborate grants by Gôpâla-Gauḍâ for the Madana-Gôpâla temple in Dêvanhaḷḷi, specifying the various classes of ministrants to be supported. On special occasions of royal ceremony 72 officials are directed to attend for the performance of the temple service.

Channapaṭna

Of the Bâramahâl chief who was related to the Vijayanagar royal family and had his capital at Channapaṭna, there are very few inscriptions. Cp 182 gives us the succession Râṇa Peda-Jagadêva-Râya, his son Jagadêva-Râya, and the latter's son Kumâra (or the prince) Immaḍi-Jagadêva-Râya in 1623. Kn 108 also gives him the date 1621. Bn 137 may perhaps be of this family.

Mughals

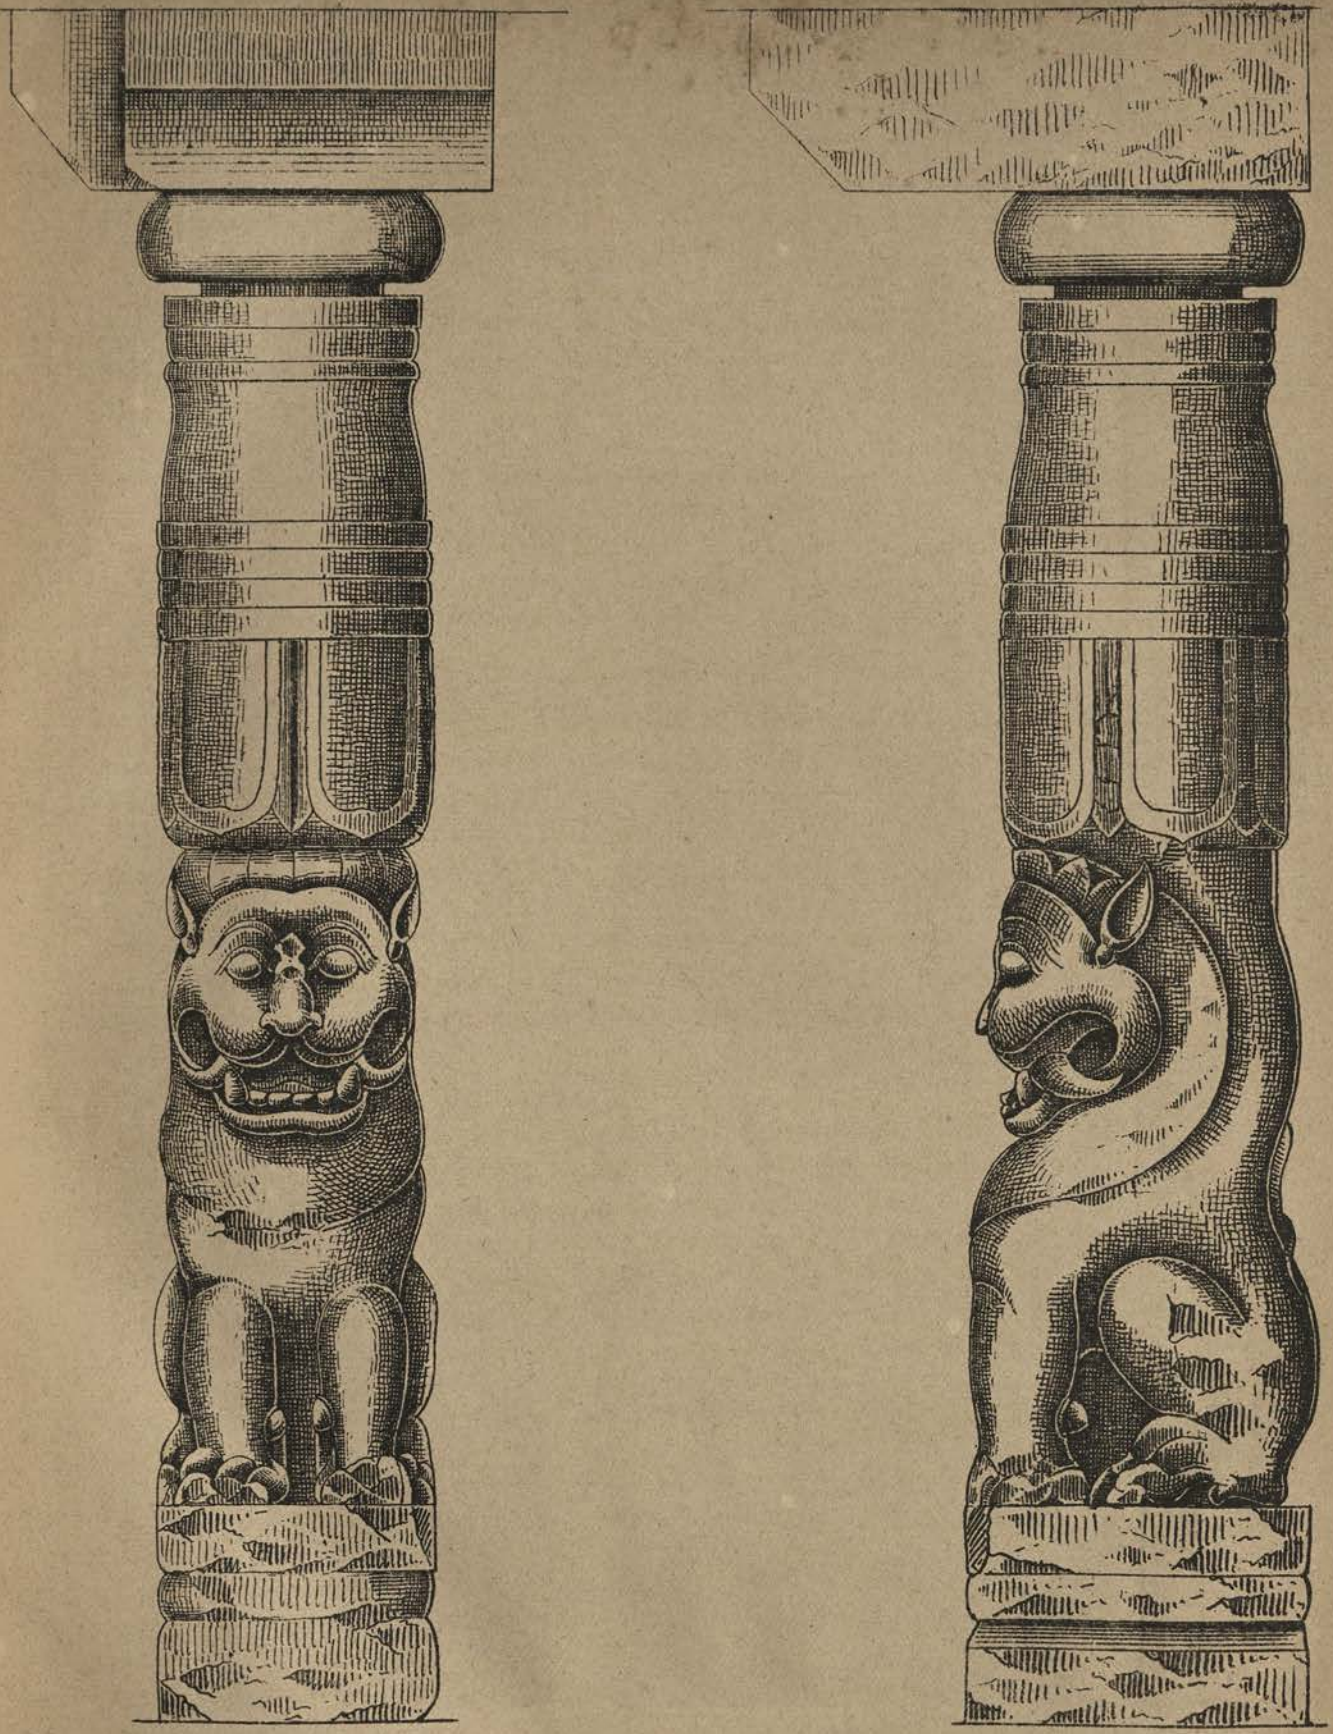
There are only two inscriptions under this head. The first is DB 31, of the time of Aurangzeb Âlamgîr, already described above (p 21) under Hoysaḷas. The other is Ht 19 of 1745, of the time of the Navâb Dilâ ar Khân, who was the Governor of the Mughal province of Carnâtic Balâghât, the capital of which was at Sîra.

Chinese

In one of the watch-towers erected at the four cardinal points round Bangalore by Kempe Gauḍa, the founder of the Fort in 1537, has been found an interesting relic in the shape of a large metal bell, placed on the raised floor. This is the eastern watch-tower, on the rocky height east of the Halsûr tank, the site of the former pumping station for the water-supply of the military barracks. The bell stands 4 feet 3 inches high and is 3 feet 1½ inches diameter at the mouth. Round the top is a foliated border, below which the body of the bell is panelled, and the mouth is fluted. On the divisions between some of the panels are inscriptions in Chinese characters. These have been deciphered,[1] and show that the bell was cast in the 5th year of the reign of the Emperor Ch'ien Lung (1741), and dedicated to the San Yüan Kung temple.

As no information could be obtained to explain how the bell came to be where it is, an inquiry was published in the Madras Mail newspaper, and has elicited the following reply from T. Cribb, (One of the old C Troop), a pensioner living at Bangalore :—"The bell was taken by C Troop, Madras Horse Artillery, commanded by Captain G. Hall, from a joss house on the top of a hill near the landing place at Nankin, and brought to Madras on board the Defiance, of Madras, when the Troop returned in 1842. It was left by C Troop at St. Thomas's Mount to be forwarded to Bangalore. This was done, and the bell was suspended in front of the Quarter Guard of the Troop. It was struck at the hours, day and night, and could be heard at the Fort, a distance of about three miles.

[1] By Mr. Taw Sein Kho, Government Archæologist in Burma, through the Director-General of Archæology.



PILLAR IN SOMESVARA TEMPLE, GANGAVARAM

One rainy night the sentry, instead of going out to strike the bell, took up a 12lb shot from a pile in the varandah, threw it at the bell and cracked it, so rendering it useless. It was then taken down and laid on the ground for some years. When Mr. Smith was Engineer of the Water-works, the bell was given to him by one of the C Troop to be hung up at 'Tipu's Look Out' on the top of the rock.'

Mysore.

Among the inscriptions of the rulers of Mysore notice may be directed to DB 64. Certain princes of the royal house brought to the Rangaswâmi temple at Mâgaḍi an elephant which the king had secured, and left it there to be guarded. Probably it had been captured in a pitfall, for it was covered with sores, and maggots were eating through its sides, so that it was about to die. The incantations or sorcery of the priests did no good, but made it worse. A reward was then offered for any one who could effect a cure. This was undertaken by a man called Puli-Bairava, and the elephant having recovered under his treatment, he was rewarded with emerald bracelets, a dress of honour, and 1000 varahas, besides the right to levy certain dues in all towns and villages where he might be.

Nl 65 records the building of the fort of Nijagal or S'ûragiri-durga, now deserted, the people having removed to Tyâmagoṇḍal. Bn 118 states that the Venkaṭêśvara temple in the Bangalore Fort was erected by Dêva-Râja, that is Chikka-Dêva-Râja, and endowed by his son Kaṇṭhîrava-Narasa-Râja. It immediately adjoins Tipu Sultân's palace on the north-east.

An 90 and Cp 32 are of 1759 and record the grant of villages to Muhammadan fakîrs by Krishna-Râja-Woḍeyar at the instance of Haidar Ali Bahâdur, who paid the value of 10 years' purchase into the treasury. On similar terms other villages were sold to private persons in 1763 (Nl 51).

In Cp 146, 18 and 114 we have grants to fakîrs made directly by Navâb Haidar Ali Bahâdur in 1763 and 1767, after he had usurped the throne. Bn 7 is the Persian inscription found in Tipu Sultân's palace in the Bangalore Fort, and is in the usual bombastic style. The palace was apparently begun in 1781, in the time of Haidar Ali, and completed ten years after, in 1791, under Tipu Sultân.

Cp 5 is the record of the foundation of the town of Closepet in 1799 by the Râja-mahârâja in the name of his friend (dôst) Colonel Close, the first Resident in Mysore, afterwards Sir Barry Close. Cp 170 is a grant by the Dewân Pûrṇaya, in about 1800, of certain villages for an agrahâra.

Architecture.

There are no great architectural remains to be specially noted. The pillars in a ruined temple at Gangavaram, which form the subject of an illustration, are of an unusual design in this State, and resemble those of buildings at Mahâbalipur.

The palace of Tipu Sultân in the Bangalore Fort was a building in the style of the Daryâ Daulat at Seringapatam. The building was of two storeys and not without some degree of magnificence. A large open space in front was surrounded by a corridor, in the centre of which, opposite the palace, was the naubat khâna or bandstand, in a gallery. The upper storey of the palace contained the public and private apartments of the Sultân and his ladies, with two balconies of state from which he gave audience. Paint and false gilding decorated the walls. The offices of the Mysore Commission were held in the building until the new range of Public Offices in Cubbon Park was occupied in 1868. A restoration of the painting on a portion of the walls was commenced some years ago, but not continued. Municipal and other offices are now located on the premises.

(Nâgarî characters).

On the seal are a tiger in relief, and the salâka or rod, with sun and moon above.

May he protect us, the original Boar, on whose tush the shadow of the mountain-like Earth made her appear as if for joy she had grown double. Display, O tongue, thy courage,— I beseech thee with folded hands,—in publishing the praises of the kings of the Lunar race ; albeit the utterance of the victorious deeds of kings is so pleasing to thee, why should I implore thee ?

From the lake the navel of the divine creator of all, the protector of the three worlds,—which contains all the world,—Vishnu, sprang a lotus ; at which S'rî, who was born from the lotus as her home, rejoiced that she would now ever without separation enjoy union with her beloved. From that lotus was born the divine Vidhi (Brahma), an ocean for the play of the waves the sayings of the śruti (or vêdas), a householder whose household duties were performed by the ever graceful Bhâratî, creator of the world with its revealed and hidden things, its past present and future, its half-formed and not-yet-formed life. From his mind was born the sage (hamsa) Atri, of pleasing character, dwelling in appointed forests, ever pure of mind. From his eye issued a stream of mercy like the river of heaven, as if the foam of which was born, giving joy to all people, the solid Chandra (the moon), the drops of shining nectar shed by whom heal the wounds that women receive from the nails of their lovers when embracing them. From him as the beginning sprang a supreme race of kings, the fire of whose valour withered up the bloom of the fame of their enemies. In it were born Yadu and many kings named in the purânas, who by their valour subdued the world, able in giving joy to kings dependent on them, devoted to learning, maintaining their thrones by the continual performance of sacrifices and festivals.

Among many such kings who thus in turn bore the burden of kingdom, was the mighty king named Sala. Once on a time, that king going into the woods near to S'aśapura in order to worship his family goddess named Vâsantî, saw there a holy muni and sat down by him for a moment in peace. While unarmed, intent on worship of the goddess and reverence of the muni, the noise of wild beasts suddenly arose in the forest. After them a tiger appeared from somewhere, his claws such as to split through mountains, with an immense tongue issuing from the cave of his wide-open mouth, sparks flying from his eyes which looked up, while his tail was raised on high, and his roar filled all the points of the compass. In the language of his own country that muni exclaiming hoy Sala (strike, Sala!), he at once slew it with the s'alâka (or rod) which he gave him. Whence all the kings of that line were called Hoysalas, while the tiger, going to svarga, as if from desire to constantly witness their fighting, became fixed on their flag, by the wind from the feathers of the arrows discharged by whom their enemies were shaken. Then was born the king Vinayâditya, the brightness of whose fame illuminated even the abodes formed of creepers within the caves of mount Mêru, delighting in the game of putting down the pride of hostile kings, able in inventing many new modes of works of piety. From him was the king Ereyanga, who placed his feet in order like a crown on the heads of kings, who by the smoke of the burning cities in which his trained horses had trampled to death all his enemies brought tears into the eyes of the groups of gods who had assembled for sport. Vishnu was his son, whose footstool was tinted from the radiance of the jewels in the crowns of prostrate kings. The black smoke of the sacrifices offered in the villages given away by whom heightened the whiteness of his fame. The clouds of dust raised by his prancing horsemen rose like smoke and blinded the eyes of the goddesses in the sky; but afterwards the waving of the flags on the temples he had erected blew it away.

His son was the king Nârasimha, who, overcoming the valour of hostile kings, consigned them to abodes in the caves of the mountains. In enjoying the sport of setting up pillars of victory relating to his numerous conquests his arm was like a pleasure-loving serpent.

His son, whose feet were served by the wives of hostile kings, was the king Ballâḷa, who deprived all his enemies of their wealth. For the pleasure of serving him and dwelling in his city, many hostile kings collected together the funds they had reserved for time of calamity. The wind from the breath of the nostrils of his prancing horses caused the enemies to shake; while in the fire of his anger the lines of his enemies' cities were burnt down. The flashing of the sword in his arm brought death into the faces of his enemies, and on his merely lifting his bow the hostile kings fell down in obeisance before him. His queen was the beautiful Padmalâ, the hands of all kings folded to her in homage. His fame in whiteness was sister to fresh jasmin, sandal, nectar, Kailâsa, the moon, moonlight, the swan, a pearl, or the Ganges.

To those two was born the son Nârasimha, with the signs of pleasure to all the world, like the moon on the shore of the milk ocean. And from them was born as Lakshmî, praised by all people, trusted by all kings, the famous Sômalâ, adorned with the garland of good qualities. When the earth was supported in the arms of that king, S'êsha went about his own business of twining round the top-knot of Dhûrjaṭi (S'iva); and the eight mountains at the points of the compass, hearing the songs of his praise sung by the Gandharvas, echoed back the songs. When, his mind immersed in the desire for war, this king Nârasimha came forth to battle, what kings could stand before him? On an expedition of victory, the points of the rods which bore the banners that preceded him were as flames the sight of which was sufficient to plunge the wives of his enemies into widowhood. On his going forth to war in the autumn, the wives of the hostile kings and their retinue were so filled with fear that the tears streaming from their eyes produced the rains of that season. That the king of the serpents supported on his soft head the heavy earth pressed down by the tramp of this king Narasimha's troops was no wonder, for the smoke of the burning cities of his enemies buoyed it up. Vikramapâla, Pâmsa, Makara, and the fierce Hoysâryama, became as animals which he offered up in sacrifice, his enveloping arrows being the darbhe grass spread round it, the battle-field his sacrificial hall, his anger the fig wood for kindling fire by rubbing, the hosts of his enemies the fuel, his glory the fire, his words of threatening the mantras, the result (or reward) of it the setting up of Chôḷa.

His son was the king Sôi-Dêva whose birth so far from being a festival of rejoicing to his enemies was an omen of death. At the birth of that lord all the evil doers were filled with sorrow, while the good were filled with joy and all the points of the compass exulted, all troubles were removed, and sins were driven afar. Mighty was Sôi-Dêva, whose feet were surrounded with the heads of prostrate kings. At his coronation-anointing the sounds of the trumpets went beyond the mountains at the points of the compass. Brilliant is the river in flood of his fame, which laid the dust raised by his enemies, put out the flames of their glory, ... Indra and Upêndra, purified the breasts of his enemies' wives (by washing off all ornamental marks, on their becoming widows), dragged off the clustres of buds the crowns of hostile kings, and bore away the troubles of the world. The movements of his horse and foot over the batttle-field raised a dust which obscured the sun, but the streams of blood flowing from his enemies was as oil feeding the fires which lighted it up. Was it the wind caused by his waving banners when he went forth to war that raised the waves of the sea? rather was it the plunging into the waters of the armies of his enemies smitten by the strokes of his sword.

In the pure ocean the Bhâradvâja-kula, born in the Sôma-vamśa (or Lunar race), was the king Chiddarasa, chief among the virtuous and among those who bear arms. His fame, white as jasmin, the moon, or ivory, was daily worn as an earring by the wives of the gods. His clever wife was the famous Vuḍanâchi, seeing whose wealth Kubêra fled with shame to the ends of the world. From her was born a daughter named Sômalâ, a collection of the essence of all gems, of slender waist, in beauty surpassing Rati, her hand adorned with a lotus, like Lakshmî in removing the troubles of the needy. To the king Sôma she became the crowned queen, and by her gifts put to shame the tree of plenty. With firm faith in the feet of Chandrâvatamsa (S'iva), that wife named Sômalâ, along with the fame of king Sôma, ascended to heaven, and with it took up her long abode.[1]

He, adorned with all titles, of pure character, the king Sômêśvara, dwelling in the great capital named Vikramapura, which he had created for his pleasure in the Chôḷa-maṇḍala that he had conquered by the might of his own arm, (on the date specified), at the time of the eclipse of the sun, in consequence of a discourse on the many gifts proper to be made on that day,— for the final happiness of his crowned queen Sômalâ-Dêvî,—giving to Madanapalli along with Mattikaṭṭa, situated in the Kalukuni-nâḍ-vishaya,—the rent of which was 140 nishkas,—another name of Sômalâpura, formed it into 70 shares, and made a grant of them to Brâhmans of many gôtras and to gods, with pouring of water.

The grant repeated in Kannaḍa, with numerous details of the rents payable. He thus gave to the Brâhmans 62 shares, 1 for the Rig-vêda khaṇḍika, 1 for the Yajur-vêda khaṇḍika, 1 for the Sâma-vêda khaṇḍika, 1 for bhaṭṭa-vṛitti, 2 for the god he had set up in the town, 2 for the tank,— altogether 70 shares, the annual rent of which, payable to the palace, was ga 140.

[1] From this it would appear that she now died.

For many yugas and kalpas, as long as the sun's chariot goes forth, as long as the sea rolls with waves, as long as rivers male and female flow, as long as the sun shines and the earth stands firm, as long as the sky with its constellations lasts, as long as Sêtu and Mêru continue,—so long may this gift of the king Sômêśvara endure. Other usual final verses.

(Persian)—As soon as the foundation of this palace was laid, its head was raised to heaven with joy. Oh, what a lofty mansion, a home of happiness, its summit being above the skies. It is a house of glass in purity, all who see it are struck with wonder. In magnificence it rivals the sky, which hangs down its head with shame. The description alone of this palace, when heard by Faridûn,[1] caused him to go to his long sleep. I sought by computation according to Zar[2] for the date, and an unseen angel said—"A house of happiness," 1196 (1781 A.D.). When the painting of this new palace was finished, it cast the beauty of China into oblivion. I sought for this date from Khizir[3] the wise, who said—"Doubtless it is envied by heaven," 1206 (1791 A.D.)

Be it well. Success through the adorable Padmanâbha, resembling (in colour) the cloudless sky.

A sun illumining the clear firmament of the Jâhnavi (or Ganga)-kula, possessed of a kingdom sprung from the swift victory of his arm, adorned with the ornament of a wound received in cutting down in battle the hosts of his cruel enemies, of the Kânvâyana-sa-gôtra, was śrîmat Kongaṇivarmma-dharmma-mahâdhirjaḥ.

His son, inheriting the qualities of his father, possessing a character for learning and modesty, having obtained the honours of the kingdom only for the sake of the good government of his subjects, a touchstone for (testing) gold the learned and poets, skilled among those who expound and practise the science of politics in all its branches, having well distributed faithful servants, author of a treatise on the law of adoption (dattaka sûtra), was śrimat Mâdhava-mahâdhirâjaḥ.

His son, uniting the qualities of his father and grandfather, having entered into war with many elephants (so that) his fame had tasted the waters of the four oceans, of wonderful skill acquired from riding rutting elephants and horses, distinguished for wealth gained through the four modes of attack, was śrîmad Harivarmma-mahâdhirâjaḥ.

His son, devoted to the worship of gurus, cows and Brâhmans, meditating on the feet of Nârâyaṇa, was śrîmad Vishnugôpa-mahâdhirâjaḥ.

His head purified by the pollen from the lotuses the feet of Tryambaka, his two arms grown stout and hard with athletic exercises, having by personal strength and valour purchased the kingdom, reviver of many thousand donations and sacrifices for long-ceased festivals of the gods and Brâhman endowments, performer of the offering of first-fruits (âgrayaṇa), remover of the fear of others, his two arms shining with gems of hard knobs produced by drawing his bow, his race glorified by his great and wide-spresd fame as the waterlilies by the rays of the moon, was śrîmat Mâdhava-mahâdhirâjaḥ.

The beloved sister's son of śrî-Krishṇavarmma-mahâdhirâja,—who, anointed with the final ablutions of the completed horse-sacrifice, was the sun to the firmament of the auspicious Kadamba-kula,—having obtained the anointing to the kingdom on the couch of the lap of his divine mother, enjoying to the full the essence of the three objects of desire without one interfering with the other, his mind illumined with the increase of learning and modesty, of a wide-spread fame gained by victory in many wars which made the three worlds appear as one milk ocean, a lake to the lotus of compassion for the bees the eyes of fair women disturbed by the shower of the arrows of the god of love, reckoned the chief among poets, the ablest among the most able, was śrîmat Kongaṇi-mahâdhirâjaḥ.

By his son, successor to the qualities of his father, his broad chest embraced by the arms of one who desired him though assigned by her father to the son of another, surrounded by feudatories subjected by the exercise of the three powers of increase, surrounded by ministers attached to him by constant affection and gifts, having with the sharp sword in his hand cut down and with his arms uprooted the hosts of his enemies, of a form glorious with virtue and set with the gems of the daily improving qualities of the best of men, though not matured in age yet possessed of ripe virtue, a mine of the clustres of many distinguished qualities, in punishing according to desert the equal of Vaivasvata, having sufficient agents for protecting the castes and religious orders in the South, having good subjects, of supreme righteousness, meditating on the feet of the divine Kamalôdara (Vishnu),—what more?—by the Yuddhishṭira of the Kali age by śrîmad Kongaṇi-mahârâja—in the third year of the great wealth increased by himself, in the month S'râvaṇa, on new moon day,—to the maintainer of the sacred fire, dwelling in Mahâsênapura, Vâsaśarmmâ .... Be it well. To the Oḍeyâr who was ruling[2] Gange, the East country, and Kaḍâram, who was the Kô-pParakêsarivarmmâ, śrî-Râjêndra-Chôḷa-Dêva, the 18th year of his reign :—

Yuddhamalla-Dêva's daṇḍanâyaka, of the Bhâradvâja-gôtra, Appaṇayya's son Vâmanayya, when his guru Mauni-bhaṭṭâraka obtained siddhi (or final emancipation), on his departure (or death), had Siddhêśvara made. And for the offerings to the god, and the perpetual light, giving money to the nâḷ-gâvuṇḍa of Kukkanûr-nâḍ in the Vikramachôḷa-maṇḍala which is Daḍigavaḷi, to the gâvuṇḍa's son Raṭṭakuḷakâla-Chôḷa-gâvuṇḍa, and to Bâṇapura Nityavinôda-Mâṇika-Seṭṭi, bought 12 kaṇḍugas of rice-land under the Bâṇapura tank,—and by the king's favour, gave it as a dêva-bhôga. This land, by the pole of 16 spans, is 1440 kammas. To this (here come many names) being witnesses,—the writer of the stone śâsana was the mahâmâtra Ajavarmmaya's son, the emperor (or master) of śâsana expressions, Puṇyaśarmma.

Chhâyâ-paramêśvara's son was named Stambhanâtha. His son, versed in the meaning of the Kaḷâgama, was the yati Dvîpanâtha. His disciple was born Mauninâtha-munipa. The bearer of the commands of his sandals, the learned Rûpaśiva, devoted to the S'ivâgama, shines in the world.

For the temple of Siddhêśvara, Rûpaśiva-paṇḍita is the master. Imprecation.

Be it well. At the root of a sacred big tree (srî-vṛîksha) in Chandrapuri, situated by the Western Ocean, was stationed Adhinâtha, by only thinking solely on whose lotus feet are destroyed the results of the (evil) deeds committed in former births. His disciple, waited on by kings, among the circle of great ones the greatest, was Chchhâyâdhinâtha, whose head the keenest rays (chhâyâ) of the sun (dinanâtha) do not affect. An intoxicated bee at his lotus feet, called Stambha, was Ḍahaḷâdhinâtha. Awakened by the dust from his lotus feet, was Dvîpanâtha the world-renowned. His disciple, invincible by other disputants, was Mauninâtha, in the form of Rudra. Like a bee at his lotus feet, the best of the twice-born, was Vâmana, chief of ministers. At the time of his guru's decease, he caused to be made of stone, in the name of his guru, the S'iddhêśvara temple, complete with enclosure, etcetera. And to the god S'iddhêśvara 12 kaṇḍugas of land in Bâṇapura were granted with faith by the daṇḍanâyaka Vâmana.

In the 41st year of the reign of Kôv-Irâjakêśaripanmar, alias the emperor śrî-Kulôttunga-S'ôḷa-Dêvar, who,—while the goddess of Fame became conspicuous, while the goddess of Victory desired him, while the goddess of the Earth became bright, and while the goddess of Fortune wedded him—rightfully wore the excellent crown of jewels; caused the wheel of his authority to roll over all regions, so that the Villavar (Chêras) became disconcerted, the Mînavar (Pâṇḍyas) lost their position, and the other kings retreated with disgrace; performed the anointment of victory; and was graciously seated on the throne of heroes along with his queen Avani-muḷud-uḍaiyâḷ:—

I, Râjarâjan Kulôttunga-S'ôḷan, alias Kulôttunga-S'ôḷa Adimûṛka-chchengirai, lord of S'ayavaranallûr in Arikêśari-vaḷanâḍu of Râjarâja-Pâṇḍi-nâḍu, granted, as a dêva-dâna, for the god Muttîśvaram-uḍaiya Mahâdêvar of Viṇṇamangalam in Kukkanûr-nâḍu of Vikkirama-S'ôḷa-maṇḍaḷam, the village Nakkûr of the same nâḍu and the surrounding wet and dry lands with their summer and winter crops, together with many taxes, including the tax on kummari, ? the cotton cloth, ? the cloth on the loom, the tax on the plough, ? the cow of the house, the family tax on the Âsipoḍu-makkaḷ, kôṛ and muṛchuṭṭu.

I have set up this stone and have (also) caused it to be engraved on it that this charity shall continue as long as the moon and the sun, and that those who protect this charity shall obtain the merit of those who perform meritorious deeds between the Ganges and the Kumari (Cape Comorin), while those who destroy this shall incur the sin of those who commit sinful deeds between the Ganges and the Kumari. This is under the protection of Mâhêśvaras.

The order of S'aṇḍîchcharan. In the sea-girt earth, the ? ruler Kaṇḍichcharan did charity in former times. I will unhesitatingly place on my head the feet of him who protects the charity of another.

(Tamil)—In the 27th year of the reign of Kô-pParakêśarivanmar, alias śrî-Râjêndra-Sôḷa-Dêvar, who,—while the goddess of Fortune, having become constant, increased, and while the goddess of the great Earth, the goddess of Victory in battle, and the matchless goddess of Fame, having become his great queens, rejoiced—in his extended happy life-time, conquered with his great and warlike army Iḍaiṭuṟai-nâḍu; Vanavâśi, shut in by a fence of continuous forests; Koḷḷippâkkai, whose walls were surrounded by s'uḷḷi trees; Maṇṇai-kkaḍakkam, of unapproachable strength; the crown of the king of Îḻam (Ceylon), which was surrounded by the impetuous sea; the exceedingly beautiful crown of his queen; the beautiful crown and the necklace of Indra, which the king of the South (the Pâṇḍya) had previously surrendered to the kings of Îḻam; the whole of the Îḻa-maṇḍalam surrounded by the clear sea ; the crown praised by many and the garland of ruddy rays, which were family treasures worn in succession by the warlike Kêraḷan ; many ancient islands securely guarded from time immemorial by the sea resounding with conchs ; the crown of pure gold, worthy of Lakshmi, which Paraśurâman, who in anger extirpated kings twenty-one times in battle, had deposited in the inaccessible S'âṇdima island, having considered it a secure place ; the renowned Iraṭṭapâḍi Seven-and-a-half lakh (country), together with the immeasurable fame of Jayasinga, who, out of fear and to his disgrace, turned his back at Muyangi and hid himself ; the great mountains filled with the nine treasures ; S'akkaragoṭṭam, whose warriors were brave ; Madurai-maṇḍalam, whose fortresses had cloud-kissing banners ; Nâmaṇaikôṇai, which was surrounded by groves ; Paṉjappaḷḷi, whose warriors possessed cruel bows ; Mâśuṇi-dêśam, abounding in green paddy fields ; a great heap of family treasures along with many other treasures, after having captured, together with his relations, Indiraviratan of the ancient race of the moon, in a battle which raged at S'âdinagaravai of ancient great fame ; Oṭṭa-vishaiyam, surrounded by dense ? bamboo thickets which were difficult to approach ; the fine Kôśalai-nâḍu, where Brahmans are collected together ; Taṇḍabutti, whose gardens abounded with bees, after having destroyed Daṇmapâla in a hot battle ; Dakkaṇa-Lâḍam, whose fame spread in all directions, after having fiercely attacked Iraṇaśûran ; Vaṅgâḷa-dêśam, of unceasing drizzle, from which Gôvindaśandan, dismounting from his horse, fled ; elephants of great strength, women and treasures, after having been pleased to frighten on a hot battle-field Mayipâla of ? S'angoṭṭal, who wore the warrior's ankle-rings ; Uttira-Lâḍam, surrounded by the vast sea which abounded with pearls ; the wave-throwing Gangai whose sacred waters were full of fragrant flowers ; and who—having sent many ships in the midst of the billowing sea and having captured S'angirâma-viśaiyôttungaparman, the king of Kaḍâram, along with his victorious fine elephants which had (well-formed) frontal globes and resembled the impetuous sea—took the great heap of treasures which he had rightfully amassed, the Vichchâdira-ttôraṇam at the war-gate of the enemy's extensive city, the wicket door set with jewels of great splendour, and the door set with large jewels ; the extensive S'ri-Vijaiyam ; Pannai, watered by the river ; the ancient Malaiyûr, which had many hill fortresses ; Mâyirudingam, the moat around which was the deep sea ; Ilangâśôbam, of undaunted heroic deeds ; Mâ-pPappâḷam, having a system of full streams ; Mâvilipangam, which had fine fortifications as defence ; Viḷaippandûr , full of luxuriant green jungle ; Kalai-ttakkôlam, praised by great men versed in the sciences ; Mâdamalingam, of steady heroic deeds ; Ilâmuri-dêśam, whose fierce strength was increased by enmity ; Mâ-Nakkavâram, surrounded by gardens resounding with bees ; and Kaḍâram, of great strength, guarded by the deep sea ;—

We—Mâṇikka-chchetṭi of Vâṇapuram and other inhabitants of Kukkanûr-nâḍu and Râjêndra-S'ôḷa-gâmuṇḍan of Vinnamangalam, the gâmuṇḍa of the nâḍu—granted, with pouring of water, to be enjoyed for as long as the moon and the sun endure, 500 kuḻi of land (boundaries given), measured by a rod of sixteen spans, for the goddess Châmuṇḍêśvari under the ? silk-cotton tree to the west of Siddhîśvaram in Koḻiyambûrchchey of Kukkanûr-nâḍu in Vikrama-S'ôḷa-maṇḍalam, to provide for offerings of rice once a day, for worship at the three times of the day, and for one pûjâri. His son, whose head was purified by the pollen from the lotuses the feet of Tryambaka, having by personal strength and valour purchased his kingdom, daily eager to extricate the ox of merit from the thick mire of the Kali-yuga in which it had sunk, was śrîman Mâdhava-mahâdhirâjaḥ.

His son, the beloved sister's son of Krishnavarmma-mahâdhirâjaḥ,—who was the sun in the firmament of the Kadamba-kula,—his mind illumined with the increase of learning and modesty, of indomitable bravery, reckoned the first among the learned, was śrîmân Kongaṇi-mahâdhirâja, named Avinîta.

His son, having the three powers of increase, who had brought anxiety to the face of Yama on account of the smallness of the residue left after the countless animals offered to him as a tribute (namely) the brave men consumed in the sacrifice of the face of the many wars waged for Andari, Âlattûr, Porulaṛe, Peḷnagara and other places, author of a commentary on fifteen sarggas of the Kirâtârjunîya, was named Durvvinîta.

His son, the lotuses of whose feet were yellow with the swarming bees the lines of the crowns of savage kings rubbing against one another, was named Mushkara.

His son, of a pure wisdom acquired from his being the abode of fourteen branches of learning, distinguished for his skill among those who teach and practise the science of politics in all its branches, a rising sun in dispersing the clouds of darkness his enemies, had the celebrated name S'rîvikrama.

His son, whose broad chest bore on itself the token of victory in the shining scars of wounds received in many battles inflicted by the tusks darting like lightning of huge elephants, possessed of the essence of all the sciences, having gained the three objects of worldly pursuit, of virtuous life and daily increasing glory, was named Bhûvikrama. Who, moreover, had conquered the Pallavêndra king in a terrible battle in the place named Viḷanda trodden to dust by the feet of a hundred elephants maddened with streams of blood issuing from the door of the breasts of warriors forced open by all manner of weapons, called the Râja Srîvallabha, in the enjoyment of fortune obtained by victory in a hundred fights.

His younger brother, whose feet were irradiated with the brilliance of the myriad jewel suns in the diadems of the great kings bending down before him, the self-chosen lord of Lakshmî, was named Nava-Kâma, beloved by the good (sishṭa-priyaḥ), his fame in destroying the hosts of his enemies being the theme of song.

Of that Kongaṇi-mahârâja whose other name was Sivamâra, the grandson, the groups of the toes of whose feet were illuminated with a rainbow light from the rays of the numerous jewels set in the bands of the crowns of prostrate kings; who had fixed his faith on Nârâyaṇa; raging with fury in the front of war horrid with the assault of horses, heroes, men and elephants; terrific in anger (or, Bhîmakôpaḥ); no less a captivator of the glances of young women the most skilled in the joyful art of love than a subduer of the world; laden with spoils of victory gained in many most arduous wars; a lion to the herd of elephants the hostile kings, a lion among kings (or, Râjakêsarî). Moreover, a sun greatly illumining the clear firmament of the Ganga race, a terror to hostile kings, a protector of the fortunate ways of good men, having obtained a good kingdom, a king of superior qualities among all kings, ever victorious is the Râja S'rîpurusha, a head-jewel among princes. To women, a Kâma (Cupid); in the use of the bow, the son of Daśaratha (Râma); in valour, the son of Jamadagni (Paraśurâma); in great wealth, Balâri (Indra); in great glory, Ravi (the sun); in government by himself, Dhanêsa (Kubêra); of a mighty and splendid energy; the benefactor of all things living, whom the poets daily praise as the creator Brahma. He, also, the middle of whose palace echoed the sounds of the holy ceremonies which accompanied his daily rich gifts,—was S'rîpurusha, the first so named, Pṛithuvî-Kongaṇi-mahâdhirâjaḥ.

His son, the chaplets on the crowns of all the kings bowing down to his glory caressing his two lotus feet; the sharp bright sword in his arm embraced by the goddess of victory on pulling down his enemy the king Vallabha with its band; the pillar his arm streaked red with the drops of blood oozing from the temples of the elephants of opposing hostile kings split open in the front of battle; having his enemies overthrown with showers of arrows from his bent bow drawn back to his ear; the sky filled with hundreds of banners won by victory in war; a king who on his becoming angry the hostile kings go in a moment into the mouth of Antaka (Yama), horrid to behold, filled with twining entrails and streams of blood; lighting up also the ten cardinal points with the glory of his fame as unspotted as the rays of the moon; distinguished by all the marks of an emperor; desirous only of benefitting others without seeking any benefit for himself; having by his administration of justice rooted out the evil practices of the Kali age; his skill in the practice of politics putting to shame Bṛihaspati; his character like a stone pillar for the support of dharmma destroyed by the myriad deceits of the host of evil kings; the world of the twice-born gratified with his constant bestowal of gifts; whose donations by absence of divided desires and by benefitting all the world, exceeded the pouring forth of water by the regent elephants. Moreover, placed in the world of endless calamities like twisted top-knots, supporter of the fine arts; friend of the learned; able in protecting; the birthplace of pure qualities; a guide of kings; famous as a poet; skilled in poetry; having seen to the farthest shore of the Phaṇisuta-mata[1] difficult to understand; of firm intellect which was a touchstone in the science of logic; his insight into the essence of the management of elephants (sâmaja-tantra) lowered the pride of the learned; of profound knowledge in expounding the system of the great yati born from the mouth of the female elephant (hastinî-vaktrôlbhava-yati pravara-mata) ; far-seeing in discussing the new enquiries into many subjects proposed by the learned ; perfect in the system he had adopted of the management of horses ; a sun in causing to unfold the lotus garden the science of archery ; author of a treatise on his own sytem of the treatment of elephants (gaja-mata) ; of no mean intellect ; builder of an ornamental bridge ; gratifier of the circle of the learned ; skilled in all matters connected with the drama, its combinations and branches ; by his unequalled form surpassing Makaradhvaja (the god of love) ; his head purified by prostration at the lotus feet of Makaradhvaja's guru (or father, Vishnu) ; of distinguished fame from victory over the Vallabha army, supported by Râshṭrakûṭa Châḷukya Haihaya and other brave leaders, which had encamped at the village named Mudugundûr-Dhôra's ? cavalry (Dhôrâśviyam), the most powerful in the region, which had spread over all quarters, he conquered by the showers of innumerable sharp arrows discharged by his arm,—this king of exceeding glory, (dispersing them) like the sun with his invincible rays dispersing the darkness, certain to rise, secure in his own sphere. He, too, who, like Hari, was ever reverenced by Dvijapati (Brahmans, otherwise Garuḍa) ; like the sun, daily duly rising ; like the world of serpents, free from fear (otherwise, birds) ; like Âtmâkara, without spots ; though Duryyôdhana (or, a strenuous fighter), yet rejoicing in the qualities of Arjuna ; though the ocean (otherwise, master of armies), not a refuge for water (otherwise, fools) ; though the moon (otherwise, of patient disposition) not united with spots (otherwise, faults). By the ornaments of the Rashṭrakûṭa and Pallava lines, the crowned kings named Gôvinda-Râja and Nandivarmma, was he anointed to the kingdom, they with their own hands binding the crown on his brow,—the sun to the clear firmament of the renowned Ganga line, Kongaṇi-mahârâjâdhirâja paramêśvara śri-S'ivamâra-Dêva.

His son, the groups of his enemies destroyed by the strokes of the sharp sword in his arms, the minds of the good gratified with his having gained lasting fame acquired from both sides (his own and that of his enemies), of fortunate character giving no place to the evils of the Kali time, a sun to the wide-spread sky of his own race, foremost among those who understand and practise the science of politics, having received shouts of 'Well done' from the delighted sons of kings on witnessing his skill in riding horses, his mighty arms like serpents encircling the goddess of victory who appeared on many fields of battle,—during his righteous reign the earth was râjanvatî : as his valour increased to the full, dharmma was greatly promoted, valiant ones as many as he required ensured his safety, and the universally loved Lakshmî uniting with him became permanently wedded to a husband. He, too, like Pitâmaha (Brahma) ministered to by many royal swans (or princes) ; the lotus (or Lakshmî) his dwelling ; like Madhumathana (Vishnu) in filling the three worlds with three paces (or his great valour) and putting down his enemy Bali (or the powerful); reposing on the king of the serpents (otherwise, of unfurnishing state) ; like Dhûrjjaṭi (S'iva) an Îśvara in unfading dominion ; a Virabhadra (or firm hero) ; like Kârttikêya celebrated in all the world as Svâmi ; possessed of a S'akti (or energy) ; like the great Mêru in overtopping all other mountains (or, by his greatness surpassing all other kings) ; of great magnitude (or great honour). Moreover, beholding the brilliance of his qualities, the world forgot the glory of Manu and the others the sixteen emperors ; the flames of his valour threatening to burn up the world betook itself to the ocean (as the submarine fire). Who, also, in the battle field shows himself an enemy, to wives a friend, to his own people an ally, to the darkness his enemies a sun ; to those who are discomfited in battle and take refuge with him, in many ways an asylum ; to wealth an abode ; shining like light into the darkness of the ignorance of the most learned, and illuminating them with his clear commands; a moon in giving pleasure to all the waterlilies (or the circle of the earth) ; in keeping Vishnu in his mind, a Garuḍa. Moreover, he whom all the world desires to praise, who on his intending to make donations even the nine treasures are insufficient, whose courage puts to shame those who have won by deceit and even the dwellers in paradise, of wide-spread fame, the joy of all the world, was Mârasimha. Who, also, though giving pleasure to the lotuses, is not hot-rayed ; though associated with the good (otherwise Râkhasas), yet not a Nṛisimha (or man-lion) ; though sporting on the backs of rutting elephants, ... ; though having a bow (or being the resort of the good), having no arrows (or not going aside) ; although adopting the daṇḍa-nîti system, not given to inflicting punishment (daṇḍa).[1] Moreover, the dust (or pollen) from whose lotus feet covers up the bees the jewelled crests of the feudatories prostrate before him.

By him, having another name Lôka Trinêtra, having the rank of Yuvarâja, whose mind was fixed like a bee on the lotus feet of the Thousand-rayed (the Sun)—when, all the feudatories having been decorated (prasâdhita) by himself, (the king) named Mârasimha was ruling the entire (akhaṇḍa) Ganga-maṇḍala ;—

There was, the commander (sênâdhipati) of all the feudatories, holding Arhata as supreme, supreme in the performance of dharmma, having acquired the powers of counsel, government and energy, named S'rîvijaya, who also like the sun eclipsed by his glory the glory of all others, yet though of such great glory he did not distress the world ; and though like Indra he issued inviolable orders, did not split the mountains (or cause dissension in the gôtras); and though like Guha he subdued by his power all his enemies, he was not a youth ; though like the moon giving pleasure and able in enlightening the world, he was not involved in night (or faults); although like the ocean the resort of all manner of living creatures, not soiled by clay or mud ; though like a bird able to see to a great distance, not a consumer of flesh ; though surrounded by S'atakratu (Indra), Budha (or the learned), Guru (or priests), and Mitra (the sun or friends), yet not incurring a curse on account of the wives of others ; though like Jhashakêta (the god of love) having brought all people into subjection, yet removing the distress of young women ; (much more in the same strain)—in Mânyanagara did S'rîvijaya cause to be made an auspicious Jinêndra temple, lofty, immaculate, suited to its grandeur. And by order of him who had decorated (prasâdhita) the circle of feudatories, śrî-Mârasimha,—the exalted S'rîvijaya obtained the Kiṟu-Vekkûru village, and gave it to the holy Arhat temple which he had created in Mânyapura. Its boundaries.

There was Tôraṇâchâryya, of the Koṇḍakundânvaya, the wisest man of this country, living in the S'âlmalî village, who had dispersed the darkness his enemies, established the good way among the people, enlightening the world by his glory. To him, who shone like the sun, was Pushpanandi the disciple, learned and the head of his gaṇa. His disciple was Prabhâchandra, who had made his abode here. Details of lands given (? to him) under tanks belonging to Jaḍiya.

The S'aka year of this—three months after the seven hundred and nineteenth year, on the 5th of the bright fortnight of Ashâḍha, in Uttara-Bhâdrapada, Monday, was the śâsana issued.

Witnesses to this gift,—the existing officials of the Ninety-six Thousand.

Usual imprecatory verses.

By Viśvakarmmâchâryya, acquainted with all the arts, skilled in the art of painting, was this śâsana written. Details of land (granted to him), to be maintained as if a dêvabhôga or temple endowment.

May he (Vishnu) protect you, whose navel lotus was the abode of Vêdhas (Brahmâ), and with the rays of whose beloved (son) Indu (the Moon) the head of Hara (S'iva) was adorned.

[1] All the sentences bear several meanings, and are difficult to translate.

Moreover, there was,—his broad chest shining with the arms of S'rî around his neck as if the garland of the kaustubha, possessed of virtue (or Satyâ), having by his long arms subdued the circle of his enemies (or by the teeth of the discus), but not of dark (or krishna) character,—Krishna-Râja in the earth. An ocean in which all the great kings took refuge from fear of losing their territories (as the great mountains took refuge from fear of having their wings cut off by Indra's discus), difficult to overcome (or to cross), shining with great and brilliant victors (or jewels), the asylum of the learned (or the gods), was the Châḷukya family,—from which like Mandara with ease he quickly drew forth Lakshmî (or the wealth of royalty)—Vallabha.

He had a son, who filled all the points of the compass with his glory, who though a sun delighted all kings with the mildness of his rays, Dhôra, gifted with courage, witherer of the bloom of the lotus faces of the wives of his enemies, whose fame was worn by the ladies the points of the compass as a garland, united to Lakshmî who though she had passed over the elder (brother) was free from blame, dwelling in a pure country in which faults were at no time committed[1]; by his gifts degrading Karṇṇa; the regent elephants ashamed to see how his gifts exceeded those of others retired to the points of the horizon; seeing how he had for a long time bound Ganga,—never conquered by others, filled with great might, having seized the world, of reputation unequalled by others,—Kali, through fear that he too would be seized, fled afar. Hemming him in between his own force on one side and the sea on the other, he obtained from Pallava, who had submitted to him, huge elephants, and greater than the warriors who had drawn their swords, and fiercer than the monsters of the deep, made the water of their pride to ooze out, yet himself never displayed any pride. Vatsa-Râja, who as in sport had seized for his own the Gauḍa kingdom,—entering into it, with his unequalled army he swiftly drove him into the impassable desert (Maru or Marwâr), and took from him only the pair of white umbrellas like the rays of the moon which belonged to Gauḍa,—causing his fame to spread in a moment to the farthest points of the compass. Kali, which had long been established, he drove afar by pure conduct, bringing back to the earth again the glory of the Krita-yuga;—how then was this great wonder, that Nirupama became Kali-Vallabha?

From the righteous Nirupama was born, like the moon from the ocean, of pure mind, his lofty head placed at the feet of Paramêśvara,[2] like the sun daily rising from the high eastern mountain, beloved by the good,—Gôvinda-Râja. While he, the abode of all good qualities, was king, the Râshṭrakûṭa line rose above the rivalry of others, as the Yâdava race on the birth of Madhuripu (Krishna), and his equals became inferiors; by his gifts his dependents were decorated with pearl garlands (or his enemies were deprived of garlands or jewels). Seeing his more than human form, and his ability to deliver the three worlds from disorder even as Krishna,—if he wished to give it him,—he truly said to his father,—"Father, let your rank and sovereignty of the earth be; you have given me the inviolable necklet (the badge of the Yuvarâja), and I have worn that as your command".

When that father, together with his fame, had departed to be an ornament to svargga,—he, though only one, by his energy deprived of their glory the twelve famous kings who like a fire of the last day came upon him desiring to unite in acquiring the whole wide earth. By him, foremost among the merciful, Ganga was released from the burden of his cruel chains and sent to his own submissive country, but he in his pride showing a return of hostility, before the brow was wrinkled in a frown, was again subdued and swiftly bound. Seeing arrows discharged from bows upon the animals, (otherwise, the bow and arrows in his hand), the bandhujîva plant spreading in glory, (otherwise, his promotion of his dependents) and the lotuses increased in every part (otherwise, his wealth increased in all directions),—taking him to be the autumn season, like the rainy season Gûrjjara disappeared somewhere through fear, and even so beheld that season in his dreams. Discerning from a distance that Lakshmî (or fortune) had taken refuge at his feet alone, the politic Mâḷava chief folded his hands to him (in obeisance), being a learned man, too feeble in power to withstand the powerful, the home of policy which discriminated between his own and others' greatness. Established in his camp in the Vindhya mountains, the king Mârâsarvva, hearing from his spies that he had come to his country, and thinking in his mind that he was Dhruva, bringing heirlooms never before obtained by others, gained his friendship by casting himself at his feet with his wealth. Passing the rainy season overcast with clouds at S'rîbhavana, from there he came with his army to the bank of the Tungabhadrâ. Remaining there, he received in full the tribute due from Pallava through his ministers, produced at a glance from his eyes, this subduer of hostile kings. At half a word by the mouth of a letter bearer, the Vengi king, wherever he was, constantly performed his service without intermission by his own wish, and built for him an outer wall, lofty as the sky, of marvellous splendour, with the constellations around its head like a garland of pearls. Through fear hostile kings accepted the order for his pure service, and folding their hands in obeisance, took refuge, placing their heads at his two feet, valuing this above that of the priceless jewels with which they were decorated.

By him, reflecting that this life was as unstable and transient as wind or lightning, for the sake of supreme merit, a gift of land was made as a temple endowment (dêva-bhôga). He, also, meditating on the feet of the parama-bhaṭṭâraka mahârâjâdhirâja paramêśvara śrîmat Dhârâvarsha-Dêva,—the parama-bhaṭṭâraka mahârâjâdhirâja paramêsvara prithvî-vallabha Prabhûtarvarsha śrîmat Gôvinda-Râja-Dêva,—

The brother of him who by the three forms of power had subjected the world, was named S'aucha-Kambha, his elder, who by his generosity, dignity and other qualities surpassed the kings of old, a sun in dispersing the darkness the elephants hostile kings, of pure character, whose fame like moonlight pervaded all regions,—by him, S'aucha-Kambha-Dêva, with another name Raṇâvalôka, who had accepted the command of the râjâdhirâja param êsvara śrî-Prabhûtavarsha,—

Of the Koṇḍakundânvaya, in the Udâra-gaṇa, there was, praised by the world, living in the S'âlmalî village, famous in the Taidat-vishaya, Târaṇâchâryya, securing the fruit of penance, by the influence of whose wisdom all evils were removed. The paṇḍita celebrated in the world as Pushpaṇandi, was that muni's disciple. His disciple, daily increasing in glory like the moon, remover of evils, destroyer of the impurity in the heart, eclipsing the orb of the moon, was Prabhâchandra.

By his instruction in dharmma having the heart satisfied, a son of Dharmma in truth, in glory eclipsing the sun and in giving (or water) the celestial elephant, the husband of S'rî, his qualities overpowered the heart of his enemies in order to force Lakshmî out of it, like Vishnu mighty in destroying the power of Bali (or the powerful), a model of valour, by his valour subduing the hosts of warriors, like the lion full of courage, was he with the well-known name Bappayya. His son, his arm a pole to support the creeper Lakshmî, was a punisher of his enemies. Listening to the application of his beloved son, and being agreeable thereto,—

For the Jina temple, an ornament to the lady the western quarter of Mânyapura, erected by [illegible]stinguished man adorned with a chiefship obtained from the favour of the râjâdhirâja [illegible]ara śrî-Nirupama-Dêva Prabhûtavarsha, his head purified by prostration in worship at the feet of the holy Arhad-bhaṭâraka, the great victorious generous ruler S'rîvijaya-Râja, twenty four beyond seven hundred S'aka years having passed, in his own year of victory,—in his victorious camp pitched at Mânyapura,—at the time of an eclipse of the moon, under the constellation Pushya, at an auspicious conjunction,—to provide for dances performed by dancing girls, singing, drums, offerings, sandal, and worship of the god, and for new works,—the village named Pervvaḍiyûr in the Eḍeḍinḍe-vishaya, free from all imposts, with pouring of water, was given. Its boundaries. And in Paderiyûr one part in ten was given. Usual imprecatory verses.

A temple which caused the rays of the sickle moon to tremble did he make, the hill of S'ankara did he make strong above, a S'iva temple did he make, and in order to make known that it was filled with merit, with affection he made in the S'ivagañgêśa mountain a temple which should be an abode for his family name,—the sâmanta-Kunjâsanam (or Brahmâ of feudatories). The jewel ornament of the Adaḷa-kuḷa, the sun to the lotus the Adaḷa-kuḷa, known as the Adaḷa lord of exalted character, Biṭṭi-Dêva, of excellent fame, made this S'iva temple. For flower garlands, worship, offerings, lights, water, sandal, incense, fried grain, vessels and cloths, he gave the tribute of 2 paṇa payable to him. Besides this, in the name of his father, the Brahmêśvara temple and Brahmasamudram village. And in addition, Jinâlayas and Adalêśvara temples, and the Adalasamudra; and the shining Vishnusamudra, as a tank filled with dharmma, did he have made and built that it might be for the exaltation of his own line,—the crest-jewel of the Adaḷa-vaṁśa, Vishnuvarddhana. After that, in memory of his father's death, he had the Bôchasamudra tank built, and to complete the glory of S'iva and promote the temple of Kêśava, he gave five koḍiges in land as dharmma, on the application of the Brahmans,—Biṭṭi-Dêva, the heroic king. Be it well with Vishnu-sâmanta, and may he live for ever.

(Nâgarî characters).

Obeisance to Gaṇâdhipati. Obeisance to S'ambhu &c. Invocation of the Boar and Gaṇêśa.

From the churning of the milk ocean by the gods arose like butter a marvel (Chandra), dispersing the darkness. His son was Budha, his son Purûrava, his son Âyu, his son Nahusha, his son Yayâti, whose son was Turvasu, born from Devayâni. In his line was born, the husband of Dêvakî, the king Timma, as famous among the Tuluva kings as Krishna among the Yadus. From him was the husband of Bukkamâ, the king Iśvara, a jewelled crown of virtues to kings. From him was born the king Narasa, the son of Dêvakî, as Kâma was born the son of Dêvakî. Many times did he with joy make the sixteen great gifts in Râmêśvara and other principal sacred places, according to the śâstras, surrounded by learned men, so as greatly to increase the fame he had in the world. Crossing over the Kâvêrî when in full flood, and seizing his enemy alive, taking possession of his kingdom, and making S'rîrangapaṭṭaṇa his own, he set up the pillar of his fame, and won the praise of the three worlds. Conquering Chêra, Chôḷa, and Pâṇḍya, and the Madhurâ king Mânabhûshaṃ, as well as the fierce Turushka, the Gajapati king and others,—from the Gangâ to Lankâ, and from the eastern to the western mountains he imposed his commands on all kings. From Tippâji and Nâgalâ-Dêvî he had the sons vîra-Nṛisimhêndra and Krishna-Râya, who were like Râma and Lakshmaṇa.

Vîra-Nârasimha, seated on the jewel throne in Vijayanagara, eclipsing in fame and policy Nṛiga, Nala, Nahusha and other great kings of the world, praised by the Brahmans as far as Sêtu and Mêru, the eastern and western mountains, ruled the kingdom, pleasing the minds of all people. Many gifts did he make in Kanakasadas, in the temple of Virûpâksha, in the city of the Kâlahasti lord, in Venkaṭâdri, in Kânchî, in S'rîśaila, S'ônaśaila, Harihara, Ahôbala, Sangama, S'rîranga, Kumbhaghôṇa, in the great Nandi-tîrtha the remover of darkness (or ignorance), in Nivritti, Gôkarṇa, Râmasêtu[1] and many other sacred places, the streams poured out along with which filled again the ocean, which was dried up by the dust raised by the hoofs of his horsemen, and thus saved the mountains whose wings were exposed to be cut off by Indra's thunderbolt. Names of the gifts he made. Having ruled a perfect kingdom without opposition, this king of the earth, famous for his virtues, went to svarga, as if to rule the kingdom of the sky.

Mightier even than him, the king Krishna-Râya took the earth upon his shoulders as if a jewelled epaulette. From his wide-spread fame all nature became as if of the same (white) colour, so that Purâri (S'iva) could be distinguished only by the eye in his forehead, Padmâksha (Vishnu) by his four arms, Padmabhû (Brahma) by his four faces, Kâli by her sword, Ramâ (Lakshmî) by her lotus, Vâṇî (Sarasvatî) by the lute in her hand. Overcome by his glory, the sun sinks into the western ocean as if quite unable to endure its distress of mind. As if fearing that the seven oceans would provide a refuge to his enemies, they were dried up with the clouds of dust raised by the earth trampled to pieces by the troops of his horsemen, but they were formed again by the measureless streams poured out with the brahmâṇḍa, svarṇa-mêru, and other his great gifts. As though, in order that the donations and wealth he had given might be long enjoyed, he would stay the chariot of the sun and provide resting places for the gods, he created pillars, stretching like mountain peaks into the sky, filled with the accounts of his victorious expeditions to each point of the compass and with the names of his titles. In Kânchî, S'rîśaila, S'ônâchala, Kanakasabhâ, Venkaṭâdri[2] and other places, so as to add greatly to his glory, did he again and again bestow the great gifts described in the śâstras, together with the grants associated with them. Punisher of warlike kings, able in protecting the world which lies in the arms of S'êsha, punisher of kings who break their word, giver of joy to his dependents, fierce in war, styled râjâdhirâja râja-paramêśvara, Suratrâṇa of the Hindu kings, destroyer of the tigers the evil, a gaṇḍa-bhêruṇḍa, distinguished by these and other titles; served by the Anga Vanga Kalinga and other kings with such words as—"Look on us great king! Victory! Long life!"—his generosity praised by the learned, this king of kings Kṛishṇa-Râya, seated on the jewel throne in Vijayanagara, surpassing by his policy Nṛiga and (all) others, shone in the power of good fortune and the fullness of fame, from the eastern to the western mountains and from the extremity of Hêmâchala to Sêtu.

The world of gods having been taken as his portion by Kṛishṇa-Râya, after him his younger brother of meritorious deeds, king Achyuta, took the world of the earth for his portion, subduing his enemies, surpassing Indra, and gratifying the desires of the learned. The moon of his fame moves in the world in all the tithis, and is ever waxing, ever giving joy to the chakôra birds, shining by day as well as by night, hateful to the lotuses (the evil). Swifter than thought or the wind are his horsemen, the trampling of whose hoofs turns the world to clouds of dust,—why mention the slow-paced horses of Indra? Fanned with châmaras by groups of the wives of hostile kings imprisoned by him, distinguished as râjâdhirâja, the terror of foreign kings, and by many other titles; often had he made the sixteen kinds of gifts in Gôkarṇa, Sangama, Nivritti, the Suvarṇa river, S'ônâdri, Parvata, Virinchipura and Kânchî, in the city of Kâlahasti also, and in Kumbhaghôṇa.[1] The ocean is drunk up by the clouds, it was swallowed by Agastya, it was agitated by the arrow of Râghava, and is ever being consumed by the flames of the submarine fire; it is indeed always in process of drying up, but the ocean of his bounty is always full. By the Anga Vanga Kaliṅga and other foreign kings is he thus unceasingly addressed,—'Victory! Long life!' Supreme is this king Achyuta, established on the jewel throne, dwelling in Vijayanagara, rejoicing in the fullness of fame, excelling Nriga Nala Nahusha and other inferior kings, the home of unequalled valour and generosity.

(On the date specified), in the presence of (the god) Viṭhalêśvara on the bank of the Tungabhadrâ, he granted to Râmâ-bhaṭṭa's son Venkaṭêśvara-yajva (sûtra etc. stated), in the Hosakôṭa-śîme of Morasa-nâḍ, Sâmbâpura as an agrahâra (boundary villages named), with its three hamlets (named), giving it the new name Achyutamahârâyâmbudhi, with all rights (specified). And accepting the proprietorship of the agrahâra, he formed it into 24 shares, which he bestowed upon the Brahmans (named). Such is the śâsana of the gratifier of the desires of the learned, and destroyer of the pride of hostile kings,—having in view Achyuta's (Vishnu's) ordinance,—of Achyuta-Râya. It was engraved by Mallaṇa's son, the carpenter Vîraṇachârya.

.. Alzafar, Mohi-ud-dîn-Muhammad, Aurangzeb Bahâdur, Alamgîr Bâdshâh, Ghâzi-ul-maghâzi,—in the year 32 of his reign, corresponding with the Hijri year 1101, the fort of Bâlâpur Kariyâtu was in the hands of the Sambâ family. It then passed from the hands of Sambâ-dûd, son of Sivâ-dûd Marhâṭṭa, through the exertions of Khâsim Khân, Faujdâr of the Karnâṭak Government, a dependency of the Subah of Bijâpur, and came into the possession of the Supreme Government. In the year 34 of the reign, this fort was granted by the Presence to this humble servant Sheikh Abdulla, known as Fârukh, renowned in India as a descendant of Sheikh Farîd-ud dîn Masaûd Chishti Al-ajrâmi, a resident of Badâyûn, suburb of Chiṭṭûr in the capital Shâhjahânâbâd alias Dehli (Delhi).

[1] Most of these places have been identified in the note above (p. 65)

[2] Originally a stone with a Hoysala inscription of 1267 (see the second part), the symbols at the top were removed and this Persian inscription engraved there, leaving the text of the original as it was.

In the year 30 of the reign was this stone brought with great care from the temple of Frâya, distant 2 kos north-east from the fort, and was intended for a building. But as it contained the grant of a charity, was erected to perpetuate his memory.

By order of the above-mentioned Sheikh, this was written by his humble servant Sheikh Muhammad Hâfiz.

His son, inheriting the qualities of his father, author of a treatise on the law of adoption (dattaka sûtra), adorned with a wound acquired from plunging into many wars, of a wealth and glory protected by Bhagavat,—was śrîmat Mâdhava-adhirâjaḥ.

His son, whose fame acquired by (his) many elephants had tasted the waters of the four oceans, skilled in riding on the best elephants and the best horses, the destroyer of hosts of enemies,—was śrîmad Harivarmma-mârâjaḥ.

His son, endowed with the group of qualities inherited from his father and grandfather, in kingly policy the equal of Bṛihaspati, his mental energy unimpaired to the end of life, of a valour equal to that of S'akra (Indra),—was śrimad Vishṇugôpa-râjâ.

His son, like Kubêra in the merit of smiting his enemies in great wars, a young (or rising) sun, his favour and his anger like nectar and like poison ; his sins destroyed by religious rites and numerous gifts of cows, gold, lands and other things ; of wide-spread fame for his renewal of Brahman endowments long since destroyed ; as performing the sacrifice of many wars, the sole sacrificer (in the world) ; like Indra, of valour invincible ; like Kubêra, wonderful in the possession of heaps of inexhaustible treasure ; like Yama in his arrows which destroyed the battlements of the neighbouring chiefs; of mighty victorious valour,—was Mâdhava-râjâ.

Be it well.[2] Success through the adorable Padmanâbha, resembling (in colour) the cloudless sky.

A sun illumining the clear firmament of the Jahnavî (or Ganga)-kula, famed for the strength and valour obtained by the great stone pillar divided with a single stroke of his sword, adorned with the ornament of a wound received in battle while cutting down the hosts of his terrible enemies, of the Kânvâyana-sa-gôtra,—was śrîmat Koṅgaṇivarmma dharmma-mahâdhirâjaḥ.

His son, inheriting the qualities of his father, with a character for learning and modesty, having obtained the honours of the kingdom only for the sake of the good government of his subjects, of great intelligence improved by acquaintance with the best principles of the essence of various sciences, a touchstone for (testing) gold the learned, skilled among those who expound and practise the science of politics in all its branches, having well distributed faithful servants, author of a treatise on the law of adoption (dattaka-sûtra),—was śrîman Mâdhava-mahâdhirâjaḥ.

His son, uniting the qualities of his father and grandfather, having entered into war with many elephants (so that) his fame had tasted the waters of the four oceans, of wonderful skill acquired from riding rutting elephants and horses, distinguished for wealth gained by the use of the bow,—was śrîmad Harivarmma-mahâdhirâjaḥ.

His son, devoted to the worship of gurus, cows and Brahmans, meditating on the feet of Nârâyaṇa,—was śrîmad Vishṇugôpa-mahâdhirâjaḥ.

His son, his head purified by the pollen from the lotuses the feet of Tryambaka, his two arms grown stout and hard with athletic exercises, having by personal strength and valour purchased his kingdom, his sharp-edged sword dear to the demons whose lips were shrivelled with hunger, reviver of donations and sacrifices for long-ceased festivals of the gods and Brahman endowments, daily eager to extricate the ox of merit from the thick mire of the Kali-yuga in which it had sunk,—was śrîman Mâdhava-mahâdhirâjaḥ.

[1] The last part is crowded up in small and cramped letters, difficult to make out.

[2] The initial word Svasti is at the beginning of the 3rd line.

His son, the beloved sister's son of Krishṇavarmma-mahâdhirâja,—who was the sun in the firmament of the Kadamba-kula, anointed with the final ablutions of the uninterrupted horse-sacrifice,—having received the anointing to the kingdom on the couch of the lap of his divine mother, enjoying to the full the essence of the three objects of desire without one interfering with the other, fearless though surrounded with all the bands of tributary chiefs whom he had subjected, having parties of councillors attached to him by continual affection and gifts, his mind illumined with the increase of learning and modesty, having adopted the character of the kings of the Kṛita-yuga, his wide-spread fame gained by victory in many wars covering the three worlds like the unbroken expanse of a milk ocean, bold to give without stint, his inviolable commands placed upon the heads of foreign kings subdued by his invincible might, surpassing Kubêra in the growth of his wealth increased in many ways, a mine of many glorious qualities, reckoned the first among the learned, the joy of the hearts of his beloved ones, in not transgressing the bounds of respect resembling the ocean adorned with gems, like Yama in punishing according to desert, like the sun in the greatness of his glory, like Vaivasvata Manu devoted to protecting the South in the maintenance of castes and religious orders, the friend of all, of high birth,—was śrîmat Kongaṇi-mahâdhirâja, named Avinîta.

By his son, whose broad chest was embraced by the Punnâḍ-râja Skandavarmma's beloved daughter, who herself had chosen him, though from her birth assigned by her father, according to the advice of his own guru, to the son of another,—having by the growth of the three powers of increase brought into subjection all the bands of tributary chiefs; having brought anxiety to the face of Yama on account of the smallness of the residue left from the animals offered up by him as a tribute (namely) the brave men consumed in the sacrifice of the many wars waged for Andari, Âlantûr, Porulaṛe, Pernnagara and other places;—by śrîmat Kongaṇi-vṛiddha-Râja, having the name Durvvinîta, the ruler of the whole of Pânnâḍ and Punnâḍ,—like Vaivasvata Manu able for the protection of the castes and religious orders which prevailed in the South, the friend of all, of high birth:—the 35th of the victories and wealth increased by himself, the year Vijaya being current,—to śrîmad Dêvaśarmma, called Mahâdêva,—promoter of the race of that sun to the world named śrîmat Vâlmîki,—of the Kâsyapa-sa-gôtra, expounder of the Vâjasêni, was given the Bempûr Iśvara-stâna named Keḷale, with pouring of water. And also certain lands (specified, with boundaries). Thus much did he piously give to Mahâdêva.

Moreover by Manu hath the ślôka been delivered:—Whoso takes away land given by himself or by another shall be cast into terrible darkness for sixty thousand years. By many kings has the earth been enjoyed, Sagara and others; whosesoever was at any time the land, his was then the fruit. To make a gift oneself is very easy, to maintain a gift made by another difficult; but of giving or maintaining, maintaining (another's gift) is more meritorious.

A gift made with pouring of water, one enjoyed for three generations, one maintained for six generations,—such may not be resumed: nor the gifts of former kings.

Obeisance to Gôpâla. Invocation of the Boar. Obeisance to S'ambhu &c. Invocation of Gaṇêśa.

Be it well. (On the date specified), in Dêvanapura, protected by the lotus feet of the lord of myriads of worlds, the ancient Purushôttama, filled full with the clustres of all auspicious qualities, the god Venkaṭêśvara, together with Madana-Alamêlumangâ,—at the divine lotus feet of the god Madana-Gôpâla, together with Rukmiṇî and Satyabhâmâ,—your chief votary, of the fourth gôtra, the great Âvati-nâḍ prabhu Mudu-Bayire-Gauḍa's [grand]son, Immaḍi-Soṇṇa-Bayire-Gauḍa's lawful wife Kempamma's son, Gôpâla-Gauḍa, for the service and ceremonies of the god Gôpâla, granted a dharma-śâsana of villages as follows;—In the Dêvanâpura kingdom, and Vaḍige-haḷḷi-hôbali, Sômêtihaḷḷi, Mêlûr, Vuḍlûr, Chatuhaḷḷi, Sagepahaḷḷi, 2 gardens, and a new tank at Sâvakanahaḷḷi, have we granted for the service of the god Madana-Gôpâla (details of the ceremonies and festivals). And for the temple priests, Upârahaḷḷi, giving it another name of Gôpalasâgara. Also for the insignia in use from the first,—palanquin, umbrella, and châmaras,—Bayichâpura and Bayirâpura. The archakas, âgama professors, purôhitas, reciters of the vêdas, the repeaters of mantras and the thousand names, the offerers of flowers and sacrifices, the providers of the sacred thread and garlands, the pârupatyagâra and śivabâga, the musicians and dancers, and all other officials will permanently carry on the worship. If any fail, substitutes must be appointed and the service of the god carried on. In the garden granted, from whatever crops are obtained, the salary of the gardeners will be deducted and the balance devoted to the service of the god. The surplus revenue of Mêlûr and Maḍlûr, and the Sâvakanahaḷḷi new tank, after allowing for all expenses on the existing scale, will be devoted to the purchase of ornaments for the god. If there should be a deficiency the palace will make it up. On special occasions of royal ceremony 72 officials will perform the service of the god. Whatever ornaments, or cars or other vehicles are required for the god must be permanently provided. Besides the rent of these villages, daily allowances and other petty charges since ordered must be maintained. Imprecations.

Lines 1 to 40 correspond in general—allowing for some variations and omissions, and alteration of the names of kings,—with Nelamangala No. 60 above, down to S'ivamâra. Thus, the first king is called Konkaṇi-dharma-varma-mahâdhirâja (revercing the titular words, as also below), Mushkara is called Môkara, Bhûvikrama is called Bhûrivikrama, Nava Kâma is called Nava Chokka, S'rîpurusha is called Purushôttama, S'ivamâra is said to be another name of Narasimha-dharma-varma-mahâdhirâja. The latter is probably a clue to the actual donor.

In the third year of his reign, the year Sarvajit, the 7th day of the bright fortnight of the month Mâgha, Sunday, the constellation being Aśvinî,—forming the Suradêvapura village, in the Kâkôḷu-maṇḍala of Morasa-nâḍ, into 24 shares, he bestowed them on Brahmans of the Vâsishṭha, Bhâradvâja, S'rîvatsa, Mauna, Bhârgava, Gautama, Râthîtara, Viśvâmitra, Kâśyapa and Kauṇḍinya gôtras, of whose names a list is given, with gôtras, sûtras, etc. Then follow the boundaries of this agrahâra, said to be marked out with sixteen stones bearing the sign of the Vâmana or Dwarf incarnation.

(Nâgarî characters)

This is the śâsana of the king Dêva-Râya, a tree of plenty to the world, whose glory is sounded by the hum of the bees the crowns on the heads of all kings[3] . May Hêramba (Ganêśa) grant to you the attainment of perfection without any obstruction, the drops from whose (elephant) temples form wide channels for the fields. Obeisance to Yajña Varâha (the Boar from the sacrifice), who in sport raised up the Earth, the world of serpents (Pâtâla) being sufficient for him to plant his hoofs on.

In the line of Yadu was formerly the king Sangama, the breezes of the châmaras (that fanned him) being the long-drawn sighs of the wives of his enemies. From him was the great king Bukka, whose arms were a support to the vine the earth, and whose sword in war provided the celestial nymphs with husbands and thus became their mother-in-law. From him was born the king Harihara, whose powerful arm outdid the pride of the king of serpents, and for whose fame in the worlds that of Nahusha is but a cloth spread for its feet to rest on. The fame diffused by the flashes of the creeper his sword was like a clustre of flowers, the drops of nectar from which were the tears from the eyes of the wives of his enemies ; through whom the sixteen great gifts, but rarely given by former kings, became the daily rule. That supreme king of kings—having performed all the dharmas prescribed in the vêdas, and placed his feet on the heads of Gajapati Aśvapati and Narapati,—obtained as a son Dêva-Râja, who was another Dêva-Râja (or Indra), merciful and the remover of the earrings of the wives of his enemies[4] . By his unassisted arm he protected the ocean-girdled earth so that it was freed from thorns (or opponents), and the fear of him covered the bodies of the terrified hostile kings with drops of sweat (otherwise, ornaments). From him was the king Vijaya-Bukka, heroic, a rising sun to the lotus the heart of the goddess of learning ; in the lotus whose face Vâṇî, in his eyes mercy, on his breast Lakshmî are ever dancing. The swan his fame, plunging into the four oceans as into a pond, and desiring increase in the shelter of its lotuses, swallowed the bulbs of the fame of his enemies. Of him was born a son,—a god of love to women, a lion to the elephant hostile kings, a wild-fire to the forest of poverty,—the king Dêva-Râya, sole hero in the world.

Assuming the crown, as S'iva crowned himself with the moon,—like Vishnu reposing on the body of the king of serpents, the king Dêva-Râja seated himself on the auspicious throne inherited in regular succession. As the bands of heavenly women on seats around the stems of the trees of paradise recite his praises, Karṇa shrivels up, the cow of plenty shams to be asleep, Dadhîchi gives vent to long sighs, the Chintâmani becomes a common stone. Where have you cast away the discus? where have you put the digits of the moon? where have you sent the S'akti? where is the sugar-cane bow? and where have you placed the thunderbolt?—thus do women ever question Dêva-Râya, discerning in him the signs of the various gods.

The Suratrâṇa of Hindu râjas champion over the three kings, that king Dêva-Râya, himself like another form of dharma, to (with sûtra &c.) the head of the line of physicians, Aruṇâchalêśa-paṇḍita's son, the famous and learned Sâlagrâma, otherwise named Kêśava, (on the date specified), at the time of an eclipse of the moon, in the presence of the god Chandramauli, in the Bhâskara-kshêtra on the bank of the Tungabhadrâ, this king of kings granted the Ilitore village, situated in tha Halasûr -sthala in the S'ivanasamudra-śîme of the Yalahakka-nâḍ, together with its hamlets Mâdigoṇḍanahaḷḷi and Sâduhaḷḷi, as an agrahâra, freed from all imposts, and with all usual rights (specified). Thus was it granted by the victorious Dêva-Râya to Kêśava-pandita.

(Telugu)—May it be prosperous. (On ? the date specified[1]). On the same day that Vîrabhadra was born in that city from the sweat of Iśvara, Vîraganṭi Maḍivâḷayya was born as a stone inscription in Kalyâṇa. To the west of that city is the Maḍivâḷayya-maṭha, in which is a regulation of Sâmba-Sadâśiva, to have effect within the four oceans. And Maḍivâḷayya accordingly brought it into force within the four oceans,—that the washermen should be fed and given betel and nut in every house in due order from left to right, and that whoever disobeys this should be excommunicated. And for the livelihood of the washermen, Iśvara's regulation is as follows ;—Here come details of various articles to be given to them,—grain, scent, cloths, ghee, areca nut, betel leaves, turmeric, &c. And besides these, the people agreed to give them 1 ga for ? decorating the head with flowers, and 1 ga for a marriage. Imprecations.

Be it well. (On the date specified)—up to which (date), in the Uttarâdi-Guṇḍalapyâṭe, the barbers from Bhutanahaḷḷi had been binding jasmin in the hair, and going (or putting it) round their pond, were doing service in the temple of the god Channigarâya of Bhutanahaḷḷi,—Maḍivâḷa Channa-S'eṭṭi who was in the said village took away the flowers, saying 'You have no authority to bind jasmin in the hair of these (temple) servants',—immediately on which, the barbers said Whether it belongs to us or not let us and you go before the nâḍ authorities and inquire.'—Accordingly, respectable persons on both sides, with the merchants, the country, nâd and village authorities (being assembled), on their inquiring (of Maḍivâḷa-S'eṭṭi)—'How is it you plucked away the jasmin which the barbers had bound in the hair ?' he said—'Our mother in whose hair the barbers used to bind jasmin said that the barbers ought not to do it.' On this the assembly asked the barbers— 'How is it that you bind jasmin in the hair ?'—To which Râmpuri Venkaṭâchala replied—'Send them and us to Kanchi, and we will do whatever is there written in the śâsana.' But Maḍivâḷa-Seṭṭi said— 'I am not going there for nothing. If in Kanchi it is decided that the jasmin is not mine, I will pay a fine to the country and nâḍ authorities and to the kula. If, on the other hand, it is decided that it does not belong to the barbers, let them give a written agreement to do the same.[1] Both sides agreeing to this, they (names given) set out for Kanchi, and there, before an assembly of all the officials and temple authorities, the Maisûr śâstris and others, stated their case. On which the authorities said, 'If you will have the śâsana in the Niśâkambha temple brought out, we will look and tell you'. And the expense of this, 40 rupees, was contributed half by each party. On taking out the śâsana and reading it, they found from it that to the barbers belonged red gaṇagaḷ flowers, red wrappers, stone hone, and ? the wicket door[2] —jasmin therefore did not belong to them. And they found from it as regards Maḍivâḷa-S'eṭṭi, that the maḍivâlige belonged to the great goddess Malige, and that the jasmin (malige) flowers, white gaṇagaḷ flowers, white umbrella, white wrappers, and riding on horseback, belonged to Maḍivâḷa-S'eṭṭi on behalf of the goddess. Thus was it written in the śâsana said to have been given by Kalyâṇa Basavappa. Whoso acts contrary to this is guilty of the most heinous sins (specified).

The barbers now gave a written agreement in Kanchi to pay their fine to the nâḍ authorities, and an undertaking not to bind jasmin in the hair in future, and came away. A copy of this has been sent to our kula. The vôle copy of this, be it known, is in the Doḍḍapyâṭe.

(Tamil)—Be it well. In the 17th year of the reign of Kôv-Irâjakêśarivanmar, alias the emperor śrî-Kulôttuṅga-Śôḷa-Dêvar, who—while the wheel of his authority rolled as far as mount Mêru on the earth surrounded by the moat of the sea which was encircled by his fame—when still a Yuvarâja, wedded for the first time the brilliant goddess of Victory by his heroic deeds at S'akkara-goṭṭam, and captured troops of rutting elephants at Vayirâgaram; who, having spurred his war-steed, unsheathed his sword and displayed the strength of his arm, put to flight the army of the kings of Kontaḷa who were armed with sharp lances, and put on the garland of victory over the Northern region; who freed the goddess with the sweet and fragrant lotus flower (Lakshmî) of the Southern region from being common property, and the goddess of the good country whose garment was the Ponni (Kâvêri) from being lonely, and put on by right of inheritance the pure and excellent crown of jewels, while the other kings of the ancient earth wore on their heads his two feet as a large crown; whose sceptre swayed over every region so that the river of the ancient Manu's rules swelled and the river of Kali's evil dried up, while the sacred shadow of his white umbrella shone like white moonlight everywhere over the wide earth, and his tiger banner fluttered on the matchless Mêru; before whom stood in many rows rutting elephants given as tribute by the kings of remote sea-girt islands; outside whose golden town lay the big head of the runaway king of the South (the Pâṇḍya), pecked by kites; who made Vikkalan—his words to Kulôttuṅga, viz., 'To-day your stain shall be like that on the crescent moon of your former family,' only proving false, so that, without even bending the bow in his hand against the enemy, he was glad to find himself in his own dominions in the Western region, leaving his furious elephants which lay dead everywhere, from Naṅgili facing the mountains, as far as the Tuṅgabattirai, with Maṇalûr in the middle, his pride being broken, his boasted valour disappearing, the mountains he ascended bending their backs, the rivers he descended into eddying and breaching their banks in their course, and the seas he plunged into becoming troubled and agitated—(who made Vikkalan) turn his back, together with his army, and seized at one and the same time the great goddess of Victory who through fear changed over from the opposite side, the goddess of Fame who was surrendered with humiliation, crowds of women left behind with indifference, troops of furious elephants irretrievably abandoned, and the two countries (pâṇi) called Gaṅgamaṇḍalam and S'iṅgaṇam; who, having resolved in his mind to acquire Pâṇḍi-maṇḍalam, along with much fame, led his great army, which, with its innumerable horses resembling the waves, with its war-elephants resembling ? the billows, and with its troops resembling the expanse of water, marched as though the northern ocean was about to overflow the southern ocean, and who, when the five Pañjavas (Pâṇḍyas) that approached the battle-field to fight turned their backs, fled in terror, and took refuge in jungles—completely destroyed those jungles, put them (the Pañjavas) to shame, drove them to hot jungles near hills where treacherous people roamed about, and planted pillars of victory in every direction; who was pleased to take possession of the pearl fisheries, the Podiyil (mountain) where the three forms of Tamil flourished, the middle S'ayyam (Sahya) where furious rutting elephants were captured, Kanni and Gaṅgai; who was pleased to establish settlements of people on all sides (in the conquered country) including Koṭṭâṟu in order that the enemies might be scattered; who was pleased to occupy the throne just for receiving tribute; and who was graciously seated on the throne of heroes along with his queen Puvani-muḷud-uḍaiyàḷ, while his enemies prostrated themselves on the earth;—

We, the members of the great assembly of Periya-Maḷavûr alias Râjêndrasimha-chaturvêdimaṅgalam in Kiḷalai-nâḍu of Râjêndra-S'ôḷa-vaḷanâḍu in Muḍigoṇḍa-S'ôḷa-maṇḍalam, being assembled, without a vacancy in the assembly, in the temple of Râjêndrasimha-îśvaram-udaiya Mahâdêvar of our village, granted, with pouring of water, the minor taxes on shops of our village for maintaining one perpetual lamp in this temple. The pûjâris of this temple shall themselves levy these taxes and maintain the lamp for as long as the moon and the sun endure.

By direction [of the assembly], the arbitrator (madhyasthan) of this village, ...makkoḍanaraśu alias Dharmapriyan, wrote this; and the stone-mason of this village, Aravindalôchanan Chandraśêkharan alias Râjêndra-S'ôḷa-kKiḷalai-nâṭṭ-âśâri, engraved this.

(Tamil)—In the 23rd year of the reign of Kô-pParakêśaripanmar alias śrî-Râjêndra-S'ôḷa-Dêvar, who,—while the goddess of Fortune, having become constant, increased, and while the goddess of the great Earth, the goddess of Victory in battle, and the matchless goddess of Fame, having become his great queens, rejoiced—in his extended happy life-time, conquered with his great and warlike army [Iḍaiturai-nâ]ḍu; Vanavâśi, shut in by a fence of continuous forests; Koḷḷippâkkai, whose walls were surrounded by śuḷḷi trees; Maṇṇai-kkaḍakkam, of unapproachable strength; the crown of the king of Iḷam (Ceylon) which was surrounded by the [impetuous] sea; the exceedingly beautiful crown of his queen; the beautiful crown and the necklace of Indra, which the kings of the South (the Pâṇḍyas) had previously surrendered to the kings of Iḷam; the whole of the Iḷa-maṇḍalam surrounded by the clear sea; the crown praised by many and the garland of ruddy rays, which were family treasures worn in succession by the warlike Kêraḷas; many ancient islands securely guarded from time immemorial by the sea resounding with conchs; the crown of pure gold, worthy of Lakshmi, which Paraśurâma, who in anger extirpated kings twenty-one times in battle, had deposited in the inaccessible S'ântima island, having considered it a secure place; the renowned Iraṭṭapâḍi Seven-and-a-half Lakh (country), together with the immeasurable fame of Jayaśiṅgan, who, out of fear and to his disgrace, turned his back at Muyaṅgi and hid himself; the great mountains filled with the nine treasures; S'akkaragoṭṭam, whose warriors were brave; Madurai-maṇḍalam, whose fortresses had cloud-kissing banners; Nâmaṇaiykkôṇai, which was surrounded by groves; Pañjappaḷḷi, whose warriors were armed with cruel bows; Mâśuṇi-dêśam, abounding in green paddy fields; a large heap of family treasures, along with many other treasures, after having captured, together with his relations, Indira-iratan of the ancient race of the moon, in a battle which raged at Âdinagaravai of unceasing great fame; Oṭṭa-vishaiyam, surrounded by dense ? bamboo thickets which it was difficult to approach; the fine Kôśalai-nâḍu, where Brâhmans were collected together; Taṇḍabutti, whose gardens abounded with bees, after having destroyed Danmapâla in a hot battle; [Dakkaṇa-Lâḍam, whose fame spread in all directions,] after having fiercely attacked Iraṇaśûran; Vaṅgâḷa-dêśam, of unceasing drizzle, [from which Gôvindaśandan, dismounting from his horse, fled]; elephants of great strength, women and treasures, after having been pleased to frighten on a hot battle-field Mayipâḷa of ? S'aṅgoṭṭal, who wore the warrior's ankle-rings; Uttira-Lâḍam, surrounded by the vast sea which abounded with pearls; the wave-throwing Gaṅgai, whose sacred waters were full of fragrant flowers; and who—having sent [many ships in the midst of the billowing sea] and having captured S'aṅgirâma-viśaiyôttuṅgapanman, the king of Kiḍâram, along with his victorious fine elephants which had (well-formed) frontal globes and resembled the impetuous sea—took the large heap of treasures which he had rightfully amassed, the Vichchâdira-ttôraṇam at the war-gate of the enemy's extensive city, the wicket door set with jewels of great splendour, and the door set with large jewels; the extensive S'rî-Vijaiyam; Pannai, watered by the river; the ancient Malaiyûr, which had many hill fortresses; Mâyiruḍingam, the moat around which was the deep sea; Ilaṅgâśôbam, of undaunted heroic deeds; Mâ-pPappâḷam, having a system of full streams; Mêviḷipaṅgam, which had fine fortifications as defence; Vaḷappandûru, full of luxuriant green jungle; Kalaittakkôlam, praised by great men versed in the sciences; Mâdamalingam, of steady heroic deeds; Ilâmuri-dêśam, whose fierce strength was increased by enmity; Mâ-Nakkavâram, surrounded by gardens resounding with bees; and Kiḍâram, of fierce strength, guarded by warriors wearing ankle-rings;—

We, the members of the great assembly of Râjêndrasimha-chchaturvêdimaṅgalam in Kiḷḷalai-nâḍu of Râjêndra-S'ôḷa-vaḷanâḍu in Muḍigoṇḍa-S'ôḷa-maṇḍalam, having received gold from Viṅgaḷakûttan, a servant of śrî-Râjêndra-S'ôḷa-Dêvar and the headman of Puliyûr in Vuḷa-nâḍu of Kshatriyaśikâmaṇi-vaḷanâḍu in S'ôḷa-maṇḍalam, gave certain lands (specified, with details of boundaries), free from all imposts, in order to provide for offerings of rice (specified), vegetables, ghee, betel-leaves and areca-nuts for the god Âḍavala Râjêndra-S'ôḷa-singar and his consort, set up in the temple of Râjêndrasimha-Îśvaram-uḍaiyâr of our village. (Totals calculated for one year are given in measures of paddy).

By their direction, I, ..., the carpenter of this village, wrote this. This is my writing.

(Tamil)—In the 23rd year of the reign of śrî-Kôv-Irâjarâjakêśaripanmar alias Irâjarâja-Dêvar, who,—while his heart rejoiced that like the goddess of fortune, the goddess of the great earth also had become his faithful wife—during his long life of growing strength, was pleased to destroy the ships at Kâṇḍaḷûr-Śâlai; conquered with his heroic and victorious army Veṅgai-nâḍu, Gaṅgapâḍi, Nuḷambapâḍi, Taḍigaivaḷi, Kuḍamalai-nâḍu, Kollam, Kaliṅgam, Iḷa-maṇḍalam of the strong and stubborn Siṅgaḷas, the Iraṭṭapâḍi Seven-and-a-half Lakh (country), and twelve thousand ancient islands of the sea; and deprived the S'eḷiyar (the Pâṇḍyas) of their splendour at the very time when their greatness, which was adored everywhere, became conspicuous;—

We, the members of the assembly of Periya-Maḷavûr alias Irâjaṇḍiraśiṅga-chchaturppêdimangalam in Kiḻalai-nâḍu of Gaṅgapâḍi, having assembled, without a vacancy in the assembly, in the temple of the god Jayaṅgoṇḍa-S'ôḷa-Viṇṇagar-âḻvâr at Nigarili-Sôḷapuram, which was a portion of Maṇalûr of this nâḍu, on the day the above god was set up, made a grant, with pouring of water, of certain lands (specified, with details of boundaries) to provide for a daily offering of 2 nâḻi of rice for the god. We gave this śâsanam, to continue as long as the moon and the sun endure, for the above god, binding ourselves to plough and cultivate the lands ourselves, and to bring to the temple and measure out fully, with the marakkâl named Jayaṅgoṇḍa-S'ôḷan, a certain quantity (specified) of clean paddy. We also authorised the pûjâris of this god ? to receive ? śuṭṭukkaḍan and a share of the produce of the above lands.

By direction of the assembly, I, Gaṇḍan Gaṇḍarâdittan, a kâṇattân (? member of the assembly) of this village, wrote this śâsanam. This is my writing.

Corresponds with Dod-Ballapur No. 30 above, down to l. 75 (always full),—omitting l. 47-58 (As though—Long life!), and 62-72 (took the world—Kumbhaghôṇa). Then goes on (l. 60)—

Born a king perfect in truth and righteousness, established on the splendid jewel throne of Vijayanagar, excelling Nṛiga Nala Nahusha and other inferior kings, the home of unequalled valour and generosity, was the king Achyuta.

Having established his fame in the earth, the king Achyuta attained to the Vaishnava seat, (that is died), and his son Venkaṭa-Dêva-Râya ascended his auspicious throne. [But] while ruling the kingdom, the treasury of wisdom, the king Venkaṭa-Dêva, to the misfortune of his subjects soon gained the abode of Indra (that is, died).

And the pearl from the womb of Timmâmbâ, the son of king Ranga, was anointed to the throne of the great empire of Vijayanagara by the ornament of the earth, the protector of the Lakshmî of the great Karṇâṭa kingdom, possessed of valour liberality and mercy, his sister's husband, protector of the world, the king Râma, along with the chief ministers. Shining like a tree of plenty on the hill of the gods, having destroyed all his enemies, from Sêtu even to Himâdri having brought all kings under his commands,—Sadâśiva-mahârâya for long ruled the earth. And the tears of joy shed at the time of his coronation-anointing flooded the earth so as to make her appear as the queen who was anointed with him. His praises and titles. The Kâmbhôja Bhôja Kâḷinga Karahâṭa and other kings held the rank of servants in his female apartments. The lord of the earth, Sadâśiva-mahârâya, bearing up the earth as an ornament on his shoulders, protecting the learned, is triumphant in highest glory. (On the date specified), in the presence of the god Viṭhṭhalêśvara on the bank of the Tungabhadrâ, to Tiruvenkatayâchârya (descent &c. stated, with praises of his learning) he gave the Mâchênahaḷḷi village (boundary villages named) situated in Kaila-nâḍ in the Channapaṭṭaṇa-śîme, with all usual rights (specified).

In the race of the Moon was born Nanda, in whose line was the king Chalikka, and in his family Bijjalêndra, whose race was adorned by Sômi-Dêva, who took seven hill-forts from his enemies. From him was born the lord of Aravîṭipura, the king Pinnama, whose son was the king Aravîṭi Bukka, who had for wife Ballâmbikâ. From him, as to Vishṇu the protector of all the world was born the god of love, so was born Râma-Râja, to whom Lakkâmbikâ became the wife. From his merit was born to him the son S'rîranga-Râja. His wife was Tirumalâmbikâ, and their son was Râma-Râja. His praises. His younger brother was Tirumala-Râja, learned as Bhôja-Râja, and devoted to his brother. Their younger brother was Veṅkaṭâdri-Râja.

On the application of Koṇḍa-Ṛâja, the son of Kônêṭi-Râja,—vîra-śrî-Râma-Râja having made petition,—Sadâśiva-mahârâya agreed to it and made the grant.

This copper śâsana was composed by Sabhâpati Svayambhu, and engraved by Vîraṇa's son, the carpenter Vîraṇachârya. Usual final verses. (Signed, in Kannaḍa) śrî-Virûpâksha.

(Sanskrit)—Obeisance to S'ambhu. Invocation of Gaṇêśa and the Boar.

Praise of the Moon, in whose line called Yadu was born the glorious king Saṅgama. Among his sons, Dârka (Bukka)-mahîpâla was resplendent like the kaustubha gem among jewels. His queen was Gaurâmbikâ. Their son, pre-eminent in virtues, of great fame, renowned for making the sixteen great gifts, was the celebrated Hariharêśvara, upon whom the Tribhaṅga, Maṅga (Aṅga), Kâḷinga and Vaṅga kings waited as servants, holding the châmaras and other royal insignia.

When, (with usual titles), Hariharêśvara, seated on his hereditary throne in the city named Vijaya on the bank of the Tuṅgabhadrâ, was ruling the earth—he examined the dâna-śâsana made by Dharmarâja in the Dvâpara-yuga, set up to the north-east of the temple of Dharmêśvara-Mahâdêva on the right bank of the Kshîra-dhunî (Pâlâr), which rises from the foot of Nandi; renovated the dilapidated temple of Dharmêśa; and, encamping with a glad heart near [the temple of] Dharmêśa, (on the date specified[1]), in the presence of [the god] S'iva named Dharma, granted, of his own accord, with pouring of water and presentation of gold coins, flowers and akshate, for the god Dharmêśvara who had taken up his abode in Dharmêśapura for the good of the world, the village famed in the world by the name of Dharmêśvarapura, situated east of Pinâkinî (the S. Pennâr) and west of S'ataśṛiṅga (the Kolâr hills), on the fine bank of the Kshîra-nadî in the Gajakôṇapurî (Anegundi) kingdom, and marked out by stones set up at the four boundaries, free of all imposts, with the eight rights of complete possession, with wells, ponds, tanks, houses and groves, to be enjoyed for as long as the moon and the stars endure.

Whatever kings protect my charity, whether descendants of my family or others, let them protect the dâna-s'âsana at Dharmêśvara-mahâ-kshêtra. Whoso performs in the presence of [this] deity the daily and occasional rites will become wealthy here and attain sâyujya (absorption into the deity) at death. If a king, acquiring fame, he will become a maṇḍalâdhipati; and afterwards he will attain sâyujya with S'iva. This is certain.

The ancient stone temple of Mahadêva on the Kunda hill in Beṭṭiyattu-nâḍ where Îśvara appeared,—(on the date specified), in the year Ânanda (1854 A.D.) the 1810060th Kali day, the Takka-mokastaru of this nâḍ, with all the people, and also the Takka-mokastaru of Kakkêri village in Ammaṭi-nâḍ, agreeing together, began to restore, at an auspicious conjunction.

And for the restoration of this great (sacred) place, Maneppaṇḍra ..... provided the funds, as an offering to Îśvara. List of people who subscribed to the same.—...saya Mâḍidêva, the S'ânabhâga Brâhmaṇa Venkapaiya, the S'ubedâr Koḍandera Mudreya, the pârupatya-vaigâr Maneppandra Puchaiya. Koḍandera Mêderaiya had the doorway made and set up. Sanṇaṇḍra Bôlaiyayya and certain gauḍas (named) had the pâṇivaṭṭa, terekala, and steps made. The jahagîrdâr of Kunda village, Hayât Khân sâbi, had the Nandiśvara in front made.

In this manner all the people united, and by the favour of S'iva completed the work of this S'iva temple (on the date specified) in the year Pingala (1857 A.D.)

To those who took part in this work.....

Date ?about 1050 A.D.

.. when Koḍuṅgâḷuva's son was ruling—Bîḷiya-seṭṭi, falling with devotion at the feet of all the Yatis, gained the glory of the gods.

Prosperity be to the Jina śâsana. The lord of Maduvanga-nâḍ, Ayya of Kiviri, kept the vow for twelve (days) in the Châṅgaḷa basadi and expired. His sons Baki and Buki set up this.

Date ? about 1050 A.D

Prosperity be to the śâsana of the Jinêndras, a sun in dispersing the darkness the doctrines of evil sects.

Be it well. Hearing with fear that Dâya-tigamati, desiring the other world, and benefactress of others, had gained the state of glory (i. e. died)—unable to bear it, saying I will obtain mukti, obtaining the consent of her relatives, the wonderful Jakkiyabbe, the muntraki of Chandiyabbe-gâvuṇḍi, the śrâvaki of Kastûri-bhaṭṭâra, performed sanyasanam and expired.

Her husband was the s'râvaka Eḍayya.

Be it well. When the mahâ-maṇḍaleśvara Chôḷa-Kongâḷuva-Dêva was ruling the kingdom of the world:—Râye Padumala-Dêvi, Nâmala-Dêvi, Tôḷûr Duddarasa, Bhadraya-daṇḍanâyaka, and Hadiyeṛa Karikaṇṇa,—all these uniting, (in the year specified), granted certain customs dues of the Muḷḷu-nâḍ Seventy for the children's children of Aṇṇattama (details of the dues).

Whoso fails in the grant made by Vîra-Chôḷa Kongâḷva-Dêva is guilty of slaughtering cows and Brahmans on the banks of the Ganges, and of Brahman murder.

In the Seventy, 5 guḷa of bhatta will be given for each house to Gangama and Bûchaṇa.

Be it well. (On the date specified), having crossed over the ocean of nectar—the âgama which issued from the lotus mouth of the holy Arhad paramêśvara parama-bhaṭṭâraka, whose two lotus feet are illumined by the rows of gems set in the crowns of all the gods and demon lords,—śrîmad Guṇasêna-paṇḍita-dêva gained the abode of Môksha Lakshmî. His guru, skilled in proclaiming the essence of the siddhânta, was Pushpasêna-vratîndra,—and of the Nandi-sangha of the Draviḷa-gaṇa, lord of the great Aruñguḷ-âmnâya, established in the supreme arhantya and others the three jewels, in the great science of grammar and all other âgamas, devoted to the six rites, thus was the vratipati Guṇasêna, âryya of âryyas, praised.

Archæological Survey of Mysore.

1879. Mysore Inscriptions, translated for H. M. Secretary of State for India, from photographs in the India Office and original sources. With Introduction and Map. Price Rs. 6.

1891. Find of Roman Coins near Bangalore, with fac-similes.

1892. Edicts of Asoka in Mysore, with illustrations.

"Cette découverte fera époque dans l'archéologie indienne."—Presidential address (by M. Senart), Academie des Inscriptions, Paris. "The most important epigraphic discovery which was made in India during the year 1892. These inscriptions have created no small stir in the learned world."—Presidential address (by Sir Charles Elliott), Asiatic Society. "Very interesting papers, not perhaps sufficiently known."—Dr. J. Burgess, in Academy.

Mysore Archæological Series.

Epigraphia Carnatica.

1886. I. Coorg Inscriptions, translated for Government, with Illustrations. Price Rs. 2-8.

1889. II. Inscriptions at S'ravana-Belgola, a chief seat of the Jains. With Illustrations, Introduction, Text and Translations. Price Rs. 12.

"Important volume."—Vienna Oriental Journal. "The editor has spared no pains in making the results of his long and arduous work of decipherment available to the student."—Trübner's Record. "A very valuable book."—Presidential address (by Mr. Beveridge), Asiatic Society. "To all who wish to study Indian Architecture of a particular class we recommend the volume as the best available professionally useful book on the subject."—Indian Engineering.

1894. III. Inscriptions in the Mysore District, Part I. Price Rs. 12.

"The numerous and various points of interest which the new epigraphic discoveries in Mysore offer, entitle Mr. Rice to the hearty congratulations of all Sanskritists, and to their warm thanks for the ability and indefatigable zeal with which he continues the Archæological explorations in the province confided to his care."—Dr. G. Bühler, in Academy. "Splendid work, of monumental character, which will bear your name to uttarâṇi yugâni."—Professor A. Weber. "Supplies a great desideratum, as it contains Saka dates for several Chôḷa kings whose inscriptions in the Madras Presidency are only dated in years of the reign."—Dr. Hultzsch, in Report for 1894-95. "The volume redounds to the credit of the author.....His work is always thorough, and in all the volumes he has published he has shown a comprehensive grasp of his subject, and placed before his readers most useful, lucid and detailed reports."—Madras Mail.

1898. IV. Inscriptions in the Mysore District, Part II. Price Rs. 10.

"The volumes contain an immense amount of most valuable information."—Professor Kielhorn. "A review of the whole field seems to show that despite all drawbacks and disadvantages there is promise in the literary activity of India to-day. And in forming this estimate we have taken no account of such official works as Mr. Rice's Inscriptions in the Mysore District (Part II) and ..... which are in themselves sufficient to make the year memorable."—Madras Mail. "Mr. Rice's labours in this direction are simply invaluable."—Report on Publications in Mysore for 1898.

1902. V. Inscriptions in the Hassan District (in 2 Sections). Price Rs. 20.

"A student of history will find the volume a repository of valuable historical material. Mr. Rice and the Mysore Government deserve to be congratulated on the great service they are rendering to the cause of Indian history."

1901. VI. Inscriptions in the Kadur District. Price Rs. 8.

Mr. Rice's archæological and epigraphical researches bear the impress of great ability and indefatigable zeal, and all his works have been characterized by an intimate and first-hand knowledge of the Kanarese people, their institutions and literature."—Madras Mail.

1902. VII. Inscriptions in the Shimoga District, Part I. Price Rs. 10-8.

1904. VIII. Inscriptions in the Shimoga District, Part II. (in 2 Sections). Price Rs. 14.

" We have taken the subjects of our first Plate—Ancient Temple Architecture in Mysore—from the last volume of Epigraphia Carnatica, issued by Mr. Rice.. There was design as well as art and skill employed in the execution of these structures."—Indian Engineering. " There are several hundreds of inscriptions of great historical value, and architectural remains which throw considerable light on the past history and civilisation of the peoples who inhabited those districts in days gone by. To the unceasing efforts of Mr. Rice the public is indebted for nine substantial volumes. With the publication of the three volumes now in the press, the Mysore Archæological Series will have exhausted the whole field of epigraphy and archæology in the Province for all practical purposes."—Madras Mail." Some years ago the Government of Mysore inaugurated a new departure in archæology, the results of which have been greatly appreciated by those who are interested in exploring the ancient history of India .. They made provision for the collection and publication by Mr. Rice of all the inscriptional records of their territory....The volumes (published) contain an enormous amount of most varied information about political history, geography, religion, literature, administrative and fiscal arrangements, social customs, and other subjects of inquiry."—Dr. Fleet, in Royal Asiatic Society's Journal.

1905. IX. Inscriptions in the Bangalore District. (Now ready).

1905. X. Inscriptions in the Kolar District. Price Rs. 14.

"A knowledge of the inscriptions found all over the Province gives us an insight into the and customs of the people who occupied the country long before we were born. Not only this, we them a picture of the mental, moral and social condition of our ancestors, including the rulers. reflect, in a vivid but yet true light, what our forefathers did in those glorious days of old ... M in his well-considered and elegantly written Introductions to the various volumes, has gat materials, and it is for the historian to put them together and construct out of them a history o from the earliest days. Not only Mysore, but also the bordering British Provinces are dealt these valuable books, and the thanks of the antiquarians are due to the Mysore Government."— Mail.

1903. XI. Inscriptions in the Chitaldroog District. Pric Rs. 9.

" The discovery by Mr. Rice of the Asoka inscriptions in the Chitaldroog District may be described without exaggeration as a discovery of an epoch-making character in the annals of Indian a rchæology ... Brahminism, Jainism, which was once the dominant creed in Karnata, and Buddhism, w ich began to spread during the time of Asoka, have all left their traces in these permanent memorials , mostly of religious charity. Patriotism, too, has had its votaries, but it is rather a crude kind of patriotism ... There is a deliberate coolness about the manner of the Indian martyr which gives it almos an appearance of malignancy. In other countries martyrs go to the stake protesting some high princip which appeals to the whole race of humanity."—Times of India. " Altogether these volumes are a s bstantial contribution to the meagre materials available for the writing of the history of India of the riod beginning with the Christian era and ending with the invasion of India by Mahmud of Ghaz . An authoritative, exhaustive and reliable work on this period remains yet to be written, and en it is undertaken Mr. Rice's volumes comprising the Mysore Archæological Series will be found be of the greatest help. "—Madras Mail. " It is said that History makes men wise ... Now History without Archæology is a man without a skeleton. The first is as impossible of existence as th ther. Archæology forms the anatomy of History ... But there are many obstacles coming in the way of an ardent pursuer of these researches'... We are glad to note however one archæologist who has done his task undaunted, with a singleness of purpose and faithful devotion. Mr. Rice has successfully and practically thoroughly carried out the archæological survey of the province. On the whole we are of opinion that he has rendered a valuable service to man, as he has helped the spread of the correct knowledge of history, which, as we have already said, is indispensable for the welfare of the community.. The Mysore Province, as we know, is full of historical mementos of the memorable events in the past. These are thus placed beyond the pale of destruction, as the information which these books contain can never be lost, though the original things which furnished it might be reckoned with the majority in course of time.—Evening Mail.

1904. XII. Inscriptions in the Tumkur District. Price Rs 9.

" The volumes constitute a very solid memorial to the activity of the Government of Mysore in matters historical and archæological, and to the genius of Mr. Rice who is responsible for their production... His introductions to each volume are themselves a storehouse of valuable information."—Times of India." Mr. Rice has done really useful work by publishing all the inscriptions found in every one of the several districts of Mysore. Any other antiquarian has no need to search for inscriptions in that State. There they are in ready volumes and all his time may be devoted to generalisation and discoveries."—The Hindu."These interesting volumes are a monument of research, and a tribute to the enlightened policy that obtains in the Mysore State."—Indian Engineering." A student of history will find in these volumes much which he is eager to digest, and he will moreover find an easy means to clear many of his doubts regarding the ancient history of the persons who ruled India in bygone times."—Evening Mail." When Mr. Rice will have completed the volumes they will bear splendid testimony to his indefatigable exertions... His volumes of Mysore inscriptions will remain not merely a standing monument to his own good work but a permanent source of stimulus and incentive to genera tions of future scholars and students."—Madras Mail.

Gazetteers, &c.

1877. Mysore and Coorg, a Gazetteer compiled for the Government of India. In 3 volumes. With Maps and Illustrations. Price Rs. 11-8.

" Models of administrative research."—Sir W. W. Hunter, in Preface to Imperial Gazetteer. "Mr. Rice has done his work well. He combines a comprehensive grasp of his entire subject with the faculty of lucid exposition, and also a careful attention to details."—Academy. " A mine of information about the country. Evidently written con amore, it shows great care and research, great knowledge of the language and literature of the country, and a thorough appreciation of the subject in hand."—Calcutta Review.

1881. Amarakos'a, the Nâmalingânus'âsana of Amara Simha, with Kannada and English meanings. Third Edition. Price As. 12.

1884. Report on the Mysore Census of 1881. Compiled for Government. With Statistical Tables and Map. Price Rs. 4.

"Has done good service to Mysore by the information he has given to the world in this valuable Census Report."—Surgeon General Balfour, in St. James's Gazette.

1884. Catalogue of Sanskrit Manuscripts in Mysore and Coorg. Compiled for Government. Price Rs. 3-8.

" Reichhaltiger Katalog, dessen Studium jeden Sanskritisten angelegentlich empfohlen werden kann."—Professor Jolly, in Oesterreichische Monatsschrift für den Orient.

1897. Mysore, a Gazetteer compiled for Government. Revised Edition. In 2 volumes. With Maps and Illustrations. (Archibald Constable & Co., Westminster). Price, half morocco, Rs. 20; full cloth, Rs. 18.

" A work of great magnitude and research, very carefully prepared and edited." —Annual Address by the Dewan (Sir K. Seshadri Iyer) to Representative Assembly, 1898. "A second edition of Mr. Rice's admirable Gazetteer. The first edition was published more than twenty years ago, and the immense progress made by the State in the interval fully justifies bringing the work up to date."—Pioneer. "Complete without being diffuse, and accurate without being dry."—Madras Mail."Mr. Rice has shown how interesting a work of this sort may be made."—"It is a highly instructive work, and so readable that if once taken up one is quite fascinated by its contents."—"In order to bring the work up to date a great deal has been required of the author, as he indicates in the preface. Both volumes are provided with excellent maps."—Glasgow Herald."As a repertory of all available knowledge about Mysore, admirably written and arranged, it is of inestimable merit and of the highest authority"—Scotsman. "Brought up to date not without considerable labour, for indeed there is much to be added and changed. Mysore was given back to native rule in 1881, and it is worth while to note Mr. Rice's opinion on the relations between the Imperial Government and the State."—Spectator. "The name of the author is sufficient guarantee for its excellence and accuracy."—Athenaeum. "Another proof (if further evidence were required) that good work gets found out. Mr. Rice himself remarks that when he first published his book he little thought he would ever be called on to issue a second edition. But during twenty years his Account of Mysore has served as a guide not only to the administrative staff, but also to the British investors who have sent their capital to the gold fields and coffee plantations of that State. It is difficult, indeed, to name a subject of interest, whether from the official, the antiquarian, or the industrial point of view, which does not find patient and thorough treatment in his volumes."—The Times.
